Weighing the risk of asbesto

ZION – Whether one slathers on SPF 60 and hides under a hat, or dabs on 15 and bakes outside, sunscreen eases concerns about skin cancer during the summer weather.

But visitors to the Illinois Beach State Park might worry when they see signs that warn of asbestos containing material (ACM).

How real, exactly, is the health risk at the park?

Not very, according to a report published by the Illinois Department of Natural Resources (IDNR) and the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry (ATSDR).

A report by the University of Illinois at Chicago School of Public Health supported those findings.

However, the report does not evaluate the risk from handling ACM, nor could it predict the friability of the ACM.

The report concluded that "the greatest risk to beach users in the targeted areas should be considered to be the potential handling of ACM."

Exposure can, according to the UIC report, impede function.

The greatest risk of all?

Mesothelioma.

Local levels

Mesothelioma is an invariably fatal form of cancer, caused by inhalation of asbestos fibers, and characterized by tumors that can form in any body cavity.

Marty DuBois, research analyst at the Lake County Health Department, said mesothelioma accounted for eight-tenths of one percent of the cancer deaths between 2000 and 2003 in Lake County. Statewide, the figure was one-half of one percent. DuBois said the difference was not statistically significant, meaning the figures are, essentially, the same.

Underestimated risk?

Former Assistant Surgeon General of the United States, Richard A. Lemen, Ph.D., who has researched asbestos for decades, said rates would peak in the future, given the continued use of asbestos in manufacturing through the middle of the 20th century, and the 20- to 35-year delay in the disease's onset.

Lemen also said underreporting results from the inferiority of medical reporting in the U.S. compared to Scandinavian countries and the United Kingdom.

Lemen said the World Health Organization, Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), Illinois Environmental Protection Agency (IEPA) and National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) have agreed that no safe threshold exists for asbestos.

According to a study by Dr. Gunnar Hillerdal, background exposure to asbestos is unavoidable in industrialized countries, and people should avoid high concentration situations.

Lemen could not cite statistics that support an increase in concentration of released asbestos fibers from burning ACM.

"Common sense would tell me that it probably does," he said.

Jeffery Camplin, asbestos abatement consultant and member of the Illinois Dunesland Preservation Society, said USEPA and IEPA recognize the hazard of ACM releasing fibers upon exposure to flames.

Plan to avoid?

Two known burns in the vicinity of the park in 2005 humed ACM.

Our Town

Just a bit of local history

The "It's Thursday" concert series, which premiered Thursday, June 29, used to take place on Sundays.

Claude LeMere, director of community services, has received phone calls asking why Thursday was chosen, and suggestions of switching to Fridays.

"Once you hear the reasons, it all makes sense," LeMere said.

The concert series debuted in the fall of 2000 on Sunday afternoons, LeMere said. Because of hot weather, attendance was low.

In 2002, officials moved the concerts to Fridays, but this adversely affected businesses, which had to compete with the concerts for diners and shoppers.

This is the first year the series will take place on Thursdays, LeMere said. This way, everybody is happy: Restaurants and boutiques will get their patrons and the village will get its concert goers. Merchants are even giving customers special offers in the hours leading up to the concert on Thursdays.

Want to check it out? Head to the William E. Brook Entertainment Center, 900 Skidmore Drive, for a celebration of veterans and military members.

Call the village hall at (847) 395-1000 for more information.

always spelled out in writing.

For one thing, lawyers often advise against it.

Such a code cannot address every possible ethical dilemma, they argue, and departing from its standards can create a liability for a newspaper.

But it's also important that we take the mystery out of journalism - that we explain ourselves and what we stand for.

For two reasons:

- Our reporters, editors and photogra-

- Our readers have standards on which they can assess this newspaper's performance.

"I can't help feeling that we, the bus drivers, are alone."
—Jenny Brown, former District 41 driver (see story below)

D41 bus drivers confused about job status

By TARA CLIFTON
tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

LAKE VILLA — As of June 23, Bonnie Keller still didn't know whether she had a job.

The District 41 bus driver of 21 years was waiting to hear from Durham School Services, based in Downers Grove, which now controls the district's transportation services.

"It's like they're trying to find something," Keller said. "I'd like to know one way or another."

Like all district bus drivers, Keller was given the opportunity to reapply for her job through Durham. Employees who chose to were interviewed, took a psychological test and were subjected to background checks.

Some drivers, though, say they had no idea they would have to apply for their old jobs, and they feel betrayed and confused.

Jenny Brown, a driver who Durham did not rehire, said employees were told they would have their jobs if they wanted them.

However, this is what officials from Jones School Bus Service, of Elkhorn, Wis., told them: Audrey Liddle, the school district's business director, said Durham bought out Jones.

"Jones said we were all hired," Brown said. "[The representative] said it was as simple as changing the names on the buses."

But drivers soon found themselves being interviewed and taking tests. Brown said she wasn't hired because of a speeding ticket she received a year ago in Kentucky.

"They're trying to out us," Brown said.

Brown wrote a letter to the school board asking for help.

"I can't help feeling that we, the bus drivers, are in this alone," Brown wrote.

Keller also said she remembers being told by representatives that their jobs were guaranteed.

Keller said Durham rehired 19 drivers, 17 did not reapply and, as of June 23, seven employees did not have answers yet. Keller said she obtained these numbers from talking with co-workers.

Liddle said Durham did inform drivers of their intention to evaluate employees, and said it was perfectly fine for the company to use its own hiring criteria.

"They have their own standards for safety," Liddle said.

Liddle said 25 of 45 drivers have been rehired, with several choosing not to apply.

Larry Hansen, district assistant director of transportation, said he was at one of the informational meetings for drivers, and the hiring process was mentioned.

Band director earns national award

By TARA CLIFTON
tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

ANTIOCH — Earl Bush sat next to one of his students in the band room June 22 at Antioch Upper Grade School doing what he loves best: teaching.

"Can you hear the difference?" Bush asked Anthony Paoli, an incoming sixth grader. "It's OK to be honest with me."

Bush was explaining to Anthony the technique of tonguing, a method of tapping the tongue against an instrument's mouthpiece to produce separate notes.

Anthony told Bush he could not hear the difference in the sound when he tongued his saxophone.

"That's fine," Bush told him. "We'll work on it."

Bush has spent the past 30 years, 25 of them at Antioch Upper Grade, helping music students do their best. The last thing he expected, Bush said, was being honored for it.

But Bush received a pleasant surprise earlier this month. He was chosen to have his biography published in the 2005-06 edition of National Honor Roll's Outstanding American Teachers. He will be listed with other instructors from across the country.

National Honor Roll is an organization that recognizes exemplary students. Outstanding American Teachers is the branch that spotlights educators.

National Honor Roll is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Nelnet, a company that offers college students financial aid information, loan consolidation, Web-based software products and more.

A former student, Abigail Mistic, nominated him for the award. She could not be reached for comment.

Bush said he remembers her clearly. "She was a flute player," Bush said. "She was very intelligent and very high-powered. Very goal-oriented."

Bush said he enjoyed having Mistic as a student, but didn't realize his influence upon her.

"I'm very humbled," he said about the award. "I'm nobody special, but this is really nice."

Actually, Bush is almost humble to a fault. This interview almost didn't happen.

"This isn't about me," he kept saying. "It's all about the kids."

Bush knows how important it is to have good teachers, based on his own experiences as a young trumpet player.

All new sixth-grade band students have private lessons with Bush, such as the one Anthony had. This is in an effort to help the students become comfortable with him and his teaching style, Bush said.

"The kids here have been outstanding to work with," Bush said. "I've been so fortunate."

Weighing the risk of asbesto

ZION – Whether one slathers on SPF 60 and hides under a hat, or dabs on 15 and bakes outside, sunscreen eases concerns about skin cancer during the summer weather.

But visitors to the Illinois Beach State Park might worry when they see signs that warn of asbestos containing material (ACM).

How real, exactly, is the health risk at the park?

Not very, according to a report published by the Illinois Department of Natural Resources (IDNR) and the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry (ATSDR).

A report by the University of Illinois at Chicago School of Public Health supported those findings.

However, the report does not evaluate the risk from handling ACM, nor could it predict the friability of the ACM.

The report concluded that "the greatest risk to beach users in the targeted areas should be considered to be the potential handling

of ACM."

Exposure can, according to the UIC report, impede function.

The greatest risk of all?

Mesothelioma.

Local levels

Mesothelioma is an invariably fatal form of cancer, caused by inhalation of asbestos fibers, and characterized by tumors that can form in any body cavity.

Marty DuBois, research analyst at the Lake County Health Department, said mesothelioma accounted for eight-tenths of one percent of the cancer deaths between 2000 and 2003 in Lake County. Statewide, the figure was one-half of one percent. DuBois said the difference was not statistically significant, meaning the figures are, essentially, the same.

Underestimated risk?

Former Assistant Surgeon General of the United States, Richard A. Lemen, Ph.D., who has researched asbestos for decades, said rates would peak in the future, given the continued use of asbestos in manufacturing through the middle of the 20th century, and the 20- to 35-year delay in the disease's onset.

Lemen also said underreporting results from the inferiority of medical reporting in the U.S. compared to Scandinavian countries and the United Kingdom.

Lemen said the World Health Organization, Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), Illinois Environmental Protection Agency (IEPA) and National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) have agreed that no safe threshold exists for asbestos.

According to a study by Dr. Gunnar Hillerdal, background exposure to asbestos is unavoidable in industrialized countries, and people should avoid high concentration situations.

Lemen could not cite statistics that support an increase in concentration of released asbestos fibers from burning ACM.

"Common sense would tell me that it probably does," he said.

Jeffery Camplin, asbestos abatement consultant and member of the Illinois Dunesland Preservation Society, said USEPA and IEPA recognize the hazard of ACM releasing fibers upon exposure to flames.

Plan to avoid?

Two known burns in the vicinity of the park in 2005 humed ACM.

For one thing, lawyers often advise against it.

Such a code cannot address every possible ethical dilemma, they argue, and departing from its standards can create a liability for a newspaper.

But it's also important that we take the mystery out of journalism — that we explain ourselves and what we stand for.

For two reasons:

• Our reporters, editors and photogra-

• Our readers have standards on which they can assess this newspaper's performance.

"Serving our communities to make

"I can't help feeling that we, the bus drivers, are alone."
—Jenny Brown, former District 41 driver (see story below)

D41 bus drivers confused about job status

By TARA CLIFTON
tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

LAKE VILLA – As of June 23, Bonnie Keller still didn't know whether she had a job.

The District 41 bus driver of 21 years was waiting to hear from Durham School Services, based in Downers Grove, which now controls the district's transportation services.

"It's like they're trying to find something," Keller said. "I'd like to know one way or another."

Like all district bus drivers, Keller was given the opportunity to reapply for her job through Durham. Employees who chose to were interviewed, took a psychological test and were subjected to background checks.

Some drivers, though, say they had no idea they would have to apply for their old jobs, and they feel betrayed and confused.

Jenny Brown, a driver who Durham did not rehire, said employees were told they would have their jobs if they wanted them.

However, this is what officials from Jones School Bus Service, of Elkhorn, Wis., told them: Audrey Liddle, the school district's business director, said Durham bought out Jones.

"Jones said we were all hired," Brown said. "[The representative] said it was as simple as changing the names on the buses."

But drivers soon found themselves being interviewed and taking tests. Brown said she wasn't hired because of a speeding ticket she received a year ago in Kentucky.

"They're trying to out us," Brown said.

Brown wrote a letter to the school board asking for help.

"I can't help feeling that we, the bus drivers, are in this alone," Brown wrote.

Keller also said she remembers being told by representatives that their jobs were guaranteed.

Keller said Durham rehired 19 drivers, 17 did not reapply and, as of June 23, seven employees did not have answers yet. Keller said she obtained these numbers from talking with co-workers.

Liddle said Durham did inform drivers of their intention to evaluate employees, and said it was perfectly fine for the company to use its own hiring criteria.

"They have their own standards for safety," Liddle said.

Liddle said 25 of 45 drivers have been rehired, with several choosing not to apply.

Larry Hansen, district assistant director of transportation, said he was at one of the informational meetings for drivers, and the hiring process was mentioned.

Band director earns national award

By TARA CLIFTON
tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

ANTIOCH – Earl Bush sat next to one of his students in the band room June 22 at Antioch Upper Grade School doing what he loves best: teaching.

"Can you hear the difference?" Bush asked Anthony Paoli, an incoming sixth grader. "It's OK to be honest with me."

Bush was explaining to Anthony the technique of tonguing, a method of tapping the tongue against an instrument's mouthpiece to produce separate notes.

Anthony told Bush he could not hear the difference in the sound when he tongued his saxophone.

"That's fine," Bush told him. "We'll work on it."

Bush has spent the past 30 years, 25 of them at Antioch Upper Grade, helping music students do their best. The last thing he expected, Bush said, was being honored for it.

But Bush received a pleasant surprise earlier this month. He was chosen to have his biography published in the 2005-06 edition of National Honor Roll's Outstanding American Teachers. He will be listed with other instructors from across the country.

National Honor Roll is an organization that recognizes exemplary students. Outstanding American Teachers is the branch that spotlights educators.

National Honor Roll is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Nelnet, a company that offers college students financial aid information, loan consolidation, Web-based software products and more.

A former student, Abigail Mistic, nominated him for the award. She could not be reached for comment.

Bush said he remembers her clearly. "She was a flute player," Bush said. "She was very intelligent and very high-powered. Very goal-oriented."

Bush said he enjoyed having Mistic as a student, but didn't realize his influence upon her.

"I'm very humbled," he said about the award. "I'm nobody special, but this is really nice."

Actually, Bush is almost humble to a fault. This interview almost didn't happen.

"This isn't about me," he kept saying. "It's all about the kids."

Bush knows how important it is to have good teachers, based on his own experiences as a young trumpet player.

All new sixth-grade band students have private lessons with Bush, such as the one Anthony had. This is in an effort to help the students become comfortable with him and his teaching style, Bush said.

"The kids here have been outstanding to work with," Bush said. "I've been so fortunate."

ANTIOCH — Antioch Upper Grade School's top administrative positions are now full.

Jim Kallieris will take Eric Skoog's place as principal of the middle school, beginning July 1.

Kallieris will work with newly-named assistant principals Alicia Corrigan and Phil Georgia.

Scott Thompson, School District 34 superintendent, said Kallieris was chosen from a pool of 84 candidates after a rigorous interviewing process.

"He has a wealth of knowledge, skills and experience that will add to the administrative team," Thompson said in a press release. "He will make an immediate impact on the AUGS community."

Kallieris could not be reached for comment.

Kallieris lives in Libertyville with his wife and two children. He formerly was principal of North Elementary School in North Chicago, a position he held for only the 2005-06 school year.

Araseli Bahena, North School's secretary, said staffers have been stopping Kallieris in the hallways constantly to say goodbye and good luck.

"He's a wonderful person and we're all going to miss him," she said.

Still mixed feelings for aquatic center

By TARA CLIFTON
tclifton@nwnewsgroup.com

ANTIOCH — Jennifer Welsh, who lives on Netherlands Drive in the Arbors of Windmill Creek subdivision, said Kathy Kurth and her friends must have a lot of time on their hands.

"We're busy," Welsh said of herself and neighbors like her who support the proposed Winnie B. Sorenson Aquatic Center.

"We have families, we have jobs, so we can't get as involved," she said.

Welsh, a mother of two boys, 1 and 2, said she fully supports the water park, which could sit right next to the Arbors along North Avenue.

"There's not a whole lot to do in Antioch," Welsh said. "We shouldn't have to go to Gurnee [for an aquatic center]."

Welsh's opinion is just one example that the battle lines are not clearly drawn in the debate over the possible water center. Living in the Arbors doesn't automatically make one against the project, just as not all village trustees support the proposal.

The aquatic center has been an evolving idea for at least five years, and in the past year the village acquired land that could become the park's home.

Officials bought 12 acres of land along North Avenue for $425,000, adding to the 8 acres the village already owned.

Trustee Lawrence Hanson, who said he is remaining cautious about the project, said the land may not even be good to build on.

"I'm sold on the fact that it was a good value to buy the property and have it, but I'm not totally sold on the location [for the water park]," Hanson said.

Money also is a huge issue, Hanson said. Taxpayers must get their dollars' worth.

"Before I support building it, it's got to fit the people that are paying for it," Hanson said. "We got to really make sure it's going to fit all the needs."

A parks department online survey should reveal those needs. The short questionnaire asks residents what features they would like to see in an aquatic center, such as a water slide, spray toys, a lazy river, an Olympic-sized pool and a recreational center.

The water park would be available to sports leagues and high schools to use as well.

However, seeing the water park come to fruition is still a long way down the road, said Village Administrator Mike Haley.

The village's first priority is a sewer treatment plant, Haley said. And even if a solid plan is drawn up for the park, coming up with a budget for the project will be very difficult.

"There is absolutely no money to start any type of construction," Haley said.

Still, Hanson said he will keep a close eye on how the project progresses.

"Just because the majority may want it doesn't make it right," he said.

Board honors Anderson

By HELEN MANSFIELD
hmansfield@nwnewsgroup.com

ROUND LAKE BEACH — Most people these days change their careers once or twice throughout their life. Even college-educated professionals will get into a different line of work from what they originally started in.

Not Dr. Michael Anderson.

Anderson, superintendent for Lake Villa District 41, has been in the education field for 36 years. He spent seven of those years in District 41.

The Round Lake Beach Village Board took the time at a meeting Monday night to recognize all the accomplishments made by Anderson during his tenure and gave him a plaque to express their gratitude.

"I am truly honored and humbled by the resolution [that recognizes me]," Anderson told the board.

He added it will be difficult to leave the communities that mean so much to him, but, in actuality, he won't be leaving his field.

Anderson said he won't be "superintending" any more, but he will be working part-time for the Lake County Regional Office of Education.

"My full-time work will be golfing," he joked.

District 41 bus drivers splitting up

Carol English, the district transportation supervisor, could not be reached for comment.

Hansen speculated that some might have simply forgotten, since only a few meetings were held and they took place several months ago.

"I feel bad," Hansen said of the drivers who were not rehired. "There's nothing else for us to do."

But Brown and Keller said they hope someone will do something. Not only do they feel deceived, but their group of drivers is being split up, Keller said.

"I've been doing this so long I'm driving some of my [former] eighth graders' kids," Keller said. "It's just a bad situation for everybody. We were a close-knit family."

Keep fireworks safe

ANTIOCH – Fireworks can be a blast, but the Antioch Fire Department wants residents to make sure the fun doesn't turn deadly.

Officials recommend going to only professional fireworks displays. Not only are these safer, but officials say they are more spectacular than anything seen at home.

Children should not be allowed to play with fireworks. If given a sparkler, close adult supervision is needed, making sure the sparkler stays away from a child's face, clothing and hair.

Once lit, maintain a safe distance from fireworks. They can backfire or shoot off in the wrong direction.

Dud fireworks should never be relit. Wait 20 minutes and soak it in a bucket of water.

For more information, contact the fire department at (847) 395-5511.

Avoid heat exhaustion, stroke this summer

ANTIOCH – With climbing summer temperatures, the Antioch Fire Department wants to remind residents to take measures to prevent heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

A day's activities should be centered around the heat index, which is the combination of the outdoor temperature and humidity. The higher the index, the higher the chances are of getting heat exhaustion or heat stroke.

To keep your body cool, wear lightweight, light-colored clothing, and drink plenty of water even when not thirsty.

Strenuous activities should be kept to a minimum or rescheduled to the coolest part of the day to keep the body from overheating. Getting too much sun also can lead to sunburn.

Symptoms of heat exhaustion include a raised body temperature, feeling faint, a rapid heart rate, nausea, and pale, clammy skin. Treatment includes moving to a cooler place, lying down with legs elevated, removing restrictive clothing and drinking water.

Symptoms of heat stroke include a high fever, dry and warm skin, confusion, rapid pulse and rapid, shallow breathing. To treat, call 911, move to a cool, shady place, and use a fan or cool cloth to help cool the body.

For more information, contact the fire department at (847) 395-5511.

Catholic Charities sponsors golf classic

LIBERTYVILLE – Tee off for charity in July.

The 2006 Charities Golf Classic, which will benefit Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Chicago's Lake County Services, will be July 31 at the Merit Club in Libertyville and the Knollwood Club in Lake Forest.

To date, the annual golf event has raised more than $1 million to benefit the local branch of Catholic Charities.

The event will feature a handicapped, 18-hole Texas Scramble and lunch. It will conclude with cocktails and dinner at the Knollwood Club.

For registration and sponsorship opportunities, or for more information, call Martha Hacker at (847) 782-4115.

Catholic Charities was founded in Chicago in 1917 to serve the poor. It has nearly 24,000 clients in Lake County.

Girl Scouts council names new CEO

VERNON HILLS – The Illinois Crossroads Council of the Girl Scouts will welcome a new CEO.

Wende Wilson is replacing outgoing CEO Reta Wilcox, who will retire on Sept. 30 after 27 years with the organization. Wilcox, a native of Arlington Heights, received the Lifetime Achievement and Excellence Awards in 2006 from the Girl Scouts of the USA.

Wilson, the incoming CEO, has worked with the Girl Scouts for 30 years. She has served as the executive director/CEO of five councils.

The Illinois Crossroads Council is the largest council in the state. It serves more than 38,000 girls in the communities of Antioch, Grayslake, Green Oaks, Gurnee, Lake Villa, Libertyville, Mundelein, Round Lake, Vernon Hills, Wadsworth, Waukegan and more.

'King and I' comes to CLC

By KATHY GRESEY
kgresey@nwnewsgroup.com

GRAYSLAKE – When Karen Yoder and her three children were discussing what they could do as a family this summer, they decided they wanted to do something different.

Performing in the upcoming production of "The King and I" in Grayslake was their solution. The musical is being held at the James Center for the Performing Arts at the College of Lake County July 14 through 23.

The cast of 64 includes CLC students and members of the community. Yoder plays a wife in the performance. Her daughters Paula, 14, and Anna, 11, play princesses, and her son Brett, 10, plays a prince.

"We thought, 'let's do something fun and exciting that we can all participate in,'" said the Grayslake mom. "It's so exciting. It's really a confidence booster for the kids."

Though Yoder and her family have performed in other CLC productions, this is the first time the group has undertaken a musical.

Paula said she enjoys performing in front of an audience. Her acting resume includes "The Hobbit" and "Charlotte's Web."

"It's amazing," she said, of the acting experience. "Sometimes

About the musical

"The King and I" is a dramatic, richly textured and poignant tale where Western culture and Eastern culture collide in the beautiful land of Siam.

Set in 1862, at the same time as our Civil War, the ideals of freedom and the social structure of colonialism form the backdrop for this tale of love and respect between a cultured Englishwoman and the King of Siam, in modern day Thailand.

A winner of four Tony Awards, six Academy Awards, four Drama Desk Awards and three Outer Critics Circle Awards, the dazzling score includes "I Whistle a Happy Tune," "Hello Young Lovers," "Getting to Know You" and "Shall We Dance."

we don't have a lot of family time during the week. [This] is a great family thing."

Round Lake Beach resident Marc Nicholson leads the cast as the King of Siam. Even with a master's degree in vocal performance, he said preparing for the show has had its challenges.

"It's been a whirlwind the past four, five weeks," he said. "I was called up at the last second to take the role."

Performers have been putting in 4 hours of practice a day to prepare for the show, which is directed by Thomas Mitchell.

Libertyville resident Michele Johnson, who plays the female lead, Anna, said that memorizing her dialogue has been a bit overwhelming.

"I've had leads before," she said. "But female leads are often smaller parts. It's my first time at CLC, and it's been a lot of fun."

Tickets for the "King and I" are $15 for the general public and $12 for CLC students, staff, Alumni Association members and seniors 65 and over.

For more information or tickets, call (847) 543-2300 or visit www.clcillinois.edu/tickets. The James Lumber Center for the Performing Arts is located on the CLC Grayslake campus, 19351 W. Washington Ave.

NASCAR THIS WEEK

NEXTEL CUP SERIES

■ Race: Pepsi 400
 ■ Where: Daytona (Beach, Fla.) International Speedway (2.5 miles), 160 laps/400 miles.
 ■ When: Saturday, July 1
 ■ Last year's winner: Tony Stewart
 ■ Qualifying record: Bill Elliott, Ford, 210.364 mph, Feb. 9, 1987.
 ■ Race record: Bobby Allison, Buick, 173.473 mph, July 4, 1980.
 ■ Last week: Jeff Gordon was born near Infineon Raceway, and his latest visit was notable even by his lofty standards. He picked up an engagement ring, some of the fine wine he himself produces in the Sonoma Valley, a trophy, $325,661 and his first Nextel Cup victory of the year. Early on the morning of the Dodge/Save Mart 350, Gordon called his crew chief, Steve Letarte. "It must've been 7:30 or 8," said Gordon. "I said 'I've got two things for you. One, we're going to win the race. Two, I'm engaged.'" Yes, indeed. Gordon announced that he will marry for the second time, to Belgian model Ingrid VandeBosch. Once the race started, Gordon led the most laps (44), but his dominance owed considerably to the inability of those around him to eliminate mistakes and curb their tempers. It was altogether fitting, of course, that Gordon won the 100th major NASCAR event ever run on a road course since he has won more (nine) than anyone in history.

WHO'S HOT AND WHO'S NOT

FEUD OF THE WEEK

Tony Stewart

Boris Said

Tony Stewart vs. Boris Said

Said, who is trying hard to become a Cup regular, expressed disillusionment with Stewart, whom he called "the greatest driver in the world." The greatest driver shoved Said out of the way a couple of times and left him with a few well-known gestures of derision to stew on. Said took exception, but said they'd make up once Stewart's temper cooled.

NASCAR This Week's Monte Dutton gives his take: "Stewart may have taken it out on Said, but what caused him to boil over was a speeding ticket from NASCAR. Every time it seems as if Stewart is maturing, along comes a race like this one."

Run-in with an oyster bed keeps Riggs in stitches

By Monte Dutton
 NASCAR This Week

SONOMA, Calif. — Though it didn't prevent him from competing at Infineon Raceway, driver Scott Riggs suffered a mishap that may be recalled for years when the phrase "freak injury" is addressed.

While vacationing briefly, between the Michigan and Sonoma races, with his family in Myrtle Beach, S.C., Riggs injured both feet while unloading his jet ski. He stepped in an oyster bed, an experience he compared to stepping on broken glass. The wounds required 12 stitches in the ball of Riggs' left foot and eight in the right big toe.

Valvoline Evernham Racing retained Bill Elliott to stand by in the event that Riggs needed relief at Infineon Raceway.

"It was a freak incident at Myrtle Beach," said Riggs. "There was no warning about an oyster bed where we unloaded."

Change in plans — Reed Sorenson is one Nextel Cup driver who isn't faring well in regular appearances in the

NUTS AND BOLTS

Busch Series. As a result, Sorenson, coming off the first top-five finish of his Cup career, concentrated solely on the Dodge/Save Mart 350.

Since owner Chip Ganassi had elected to put road-racing specialist Scott Pruett in the No. 40 Dodge normally driven by Sorenson's teammate, David Stremme, that move freed Stremme to drive Sorenson's Dodge in the Busch Series race at The Milwaukee Mile in West Allis, Wis.

Stremme, who is still looking for his first Busch Series victory, had three times finished in the top five at Milwaukee. This time, by the way, he was 26th after being involved in a crash.

"If we were a little better off in the point standings, I would more than likely be making the trip to Milwaukee," said Sorenson. "Since we're not, though, we all thought it would be better to focus all of my attention on the Infineon race. I've never raced at the track and don't have a ton of road-course experience."

Racing League held its annual race at Richmond International Raceway, where the difference in speed between Indy cars and NASCAR is at its most compelling.

A year ago, Sam Hornish Jr. qualified at an average speed of 176.244 mph at the .75-mile track. The Nextel Cup record belongs to Brian Vickers, who averaged 129.983 mph back in 2004. That's the largest difference among the tracks where both series hold races.

Winter game, summer fun

AAU basketball continues to flourish in Lake County

By DANIEL J. PATRICK
dpatrick@nwnewsgroup.com

Isn't it supposed to be baseball season these days?

With the IHSA basketball season now a distant memory, and the NBA season coming to close, there still are dedicated basketball players honing their craft and competing on courts all over the state.

In the dead of the summer heat, gyms all over the area are filled with a cornucopia of roundball skill, from 10- and 11-year-olds just beginning to grasp the subtleties of the game to high school seniors honing their skills for the college level.

It's not just practice, it's competition. And it's the AAU.

One AAU team that has made a mark in the Lake County scene is the NISA Hoopstars. With teams from the U-11 level all the way up through seniors in high school, the Hoopstars have battled with numerous teams around the state. Some familiar faces on the NISA Hoopstars roster include Warren players David Boothe and Keith Edwards, and Grayslake Central's Justin Van Schaik.

While the AAU basketball scene has exploded within the last decade as an essential tool for building varsity-caliber skill, AAU competition actually has its roots in the late 1880s. At that time, the Amateur Athletic Union was founded to establish standards and uniformity in sports of all kinds.

In the 1950's, AAU basketball teams were treated more as a supplement to college and NBA seasons as opposed to its current station for youth players. From its roots as a governing body, AAU basketball has grown in participation as it has become a supplement for traditional high school varsity seasons.

Hoopstars varsity coach Wayne Weese has witnessed this recent growth firsthand, working with various area AAU teams for more than a decade.

"It's grown quite a bit, especially in the Lake County area since this team started up," Weese said. "Now there's quite a bit more competition with other teams, but we've won numerous national championships and we want to see the team rejuvenated to what it was before."

While Weese is helping high schoolers fine-tune their games, some Hoopstars are just beginning to truly learn the game. The U-11 team has players in the third through fifth grade – a vital time when children are first starting to gain the physical strength and coordination to grasp the game.

"This is the age when a lot of the basic fundamentals are already in place. Now we're teaching them some of the strategy in the game," Hoopstars U-11 coach Thomas Hartfield Jr. said. "At this age, a lot of the kids tend to get easily distracted, but you get some that really want to focus on learning basketball."

Facing the ultimate challenge

Wauconda gears up for Triathlon

By DANIEL J. PATRICK
dpatrick@nwnewsgroup.com

It started out as a dare for Grayslake's Michael Cox.

At 41 years of age, a mild-mannered software salesman started training for his first triathlon. Now, more than four years later and hundreds of miles covered on land and sea, he's never looked back.

Cox, now a seasoned veteran at the age of 45, has biked, run and swum his way through multiple triathlons, including the grueling Ironman Triathlon. To place the final competition in perspective, competitors swim for 2.4 miles, bike for 112 miles and run a full 26.2-mile marathon; all back-to-back.

While he's set his sights on the Life Time Fitness Triathlon in Minneapolis, Cox said the sport of the triathlon has an appeal unmatched by other athletic events.

"Once you start doing it, you really get hooked," Cox said. "It's definitely grueling ... but they're also kind of fun. It's such a great sense of accomplishment when you're done."

That sort of addictive quality is exactly what Wauconda Park District organizers are counting on as they get set to kick off the inaugural Wauconda Sprint Triathlon.

"We came up with the triathlon because we already do a 5K and 10K road races, and triathlons are becoming more popular these days as people get more health conscious," Wauconda Sprint Triathlon organizer Tim Staton said. "We looked at our facility and we knew we had a good place for it because our park has bike

U.S. soccer squad suffers another regression

The dance steps for the U.S. soccer team aren't difficult to learn. Here, try them.

One step forward.

Two steps back.

Easy, right? Yeah, the national team happens to be getting pretty good at it, too. Two Thursdays ago, it was bounced from the World Cup in Germany, losing, 2-1, to Ghana.

If ever there was a way to erase the momentum built in 2002's run to the quarterfinals, this was it.

In its three games, the U.S. managed only one tie, one goal by its offense and managed to make the Czech Republic look like a lock for the final, despite that team failing to score in its next two matches.

And so when the team returns to native soil, there will be no more magazine covers, no more appearances on Letterman, no more of those cool Gatorade commercials with the piano playing in the background.

Instead, the U.S. Soccer Federation will be asked about the future of coach Bruce Arena, who stubbornly stuck with a one-forward scheme even when it became apparent it wouldn't produce the offense his team so badly needed.

Arena will be queried about the underwhelming performance of Landon Donovan, for better or worse the face of the national team and its potential captain in 2010.

The entire team will have to own up to its failure to reach the knockout round, even when it entered the tournament with a No. 5 world ranking and a label as the most talented American group to take the international pitch.

We've seen this whole regression thing before. In 1994, the U.S. team performed admirably on its own turf, defeating Columbia and reaching the round of 16 before losing, 1-0, to eventual champion Brazil. The effort sowed the seeds for the popularity soccer enjoys in the country today; the MLS was formed, ESPN took a greater liking to the sport, and players earned household names.

Four years later, the Americans failed to win or tie a single match, finishing last of the 32 teams that had traveled to France.

Thursday was a day for the soccerphobes in this country to happily remind the soccerphans that the U.S. had been eliminated.

That these are people who probably also boo their grandmothers at the bingo hall provides little consolation; it'll be another four years until Uncle Sam's Army can mount another run at international legitimacy.

On the Sidelines

American sports having its ups, downs

With our nation's birthday now here, I think it's a great time to look at the overall sports scene within our country. While there's plenty of fun for us here playing in our own sports, when we truly had the chance to go up against the world we fell flat.

On our own, America's been putting out some great competition.

In my opinion, the NBA playoffs was the best it has been in years. Between Pat Riley's hair gel addiction and Mark

Daniel J. Patrick

Cuban's all-too-obvious need for Ritalin, the 2006 NBA Finals were excellent. Oh yeah, and there was some great basketball too.

Miami's Game 3 comeback from 13 down to go on to win four in a row was the stuff of legend. In addition to Dwyane Wade's emergence as a superstar, we saw a truly competitive series as three games were decided by three points or less.

Besides, in the grand scheme of NBA basketball, only two other teams, the '69 Boston Celtics and '77 Portland Trail Blazers, have come back from a 2-0 deficit to win the championship in six.

Thanks to this year's amazing series, I'm finally an NBA fan again.

As for the women's side of that equation, the Chicago Sky is definitely showing its status as an expansion team to the tune of a league-worst 1-13 record, with all losses coming in succession, tying the Sky for the worst losing streak in league history. Despite their troubles, I hope as many fans will check them out as possible.

On the baseball diamond, well, there's been plenty to talk about for all of us in Chicagoland. Between the Cubs' implosion to the Sox winning despite trouble in the Land of Oz, this has been a bipolar year for Chicago sports fans.

Between Wood and Prior doing everything short of spontaneously combusting to questions about Dusty Baker, there's really been nothing to cheer about on the north side. Yeah, Derrek Lee's back, but I don't think that one player can turn around this trainwreck. On the north side, the only feeling there possibly could be is a deep, deep depression.

The Chicago baseball bipolar disorder is magnified for the Cell gang, as there's been plenty to cheer about on the field, but not too many positives off of it. On the field, the Sox came within an inch of having their first 10-game win streak in more than two decades, losing the final game despite an amazing comeback.

Off the field, well, I think you all know the story. While I've personally never been to sensitivity training, it's pretty obvious that everyone involved in this whole Guillen/Mariotti fiasco could use a class or two.

Oh, and then there's that whole World Cup thing.

It was four years in the making, with America's greatest soccer stars going up against the best in the worlds. And while we continue our reign as one of the most powerful countries in the world, it certainly didn't show on the soccer field.

Ghana hammered in the final nail in the red, white and blue World Cup coffin with a 2-1 win. I guess it proves that on the soccer field, the only way we can truly win is when we're playing with ourselves.

Hopefully, with four more years of work, we can return to the international soccer form we never truly had.

From Guillen's mouth to Dwyane Wade's game, there have been plenty of fireworks for us to enjoy as we celebrate our country's 230th birthday.

No break: AAU players readying for next season

• AAU

Richmond-Burton freshman Chad Blanton calls 10 Warren players his teammates for the summer, but he might have to eventually meet them as enemies. Despite the potential conflict, Blanton said he wouldn't give up his AAU experience for anything.

"I love it. I've been with the team for four years and I can't wait to play every day," Blanton said. "I just love the intensity. Unlike baseball, it doesn't stop, so I'll play for as long as I can."

AAU coaches get another type of enjoyment out of the season. For coach Hartfield, it gives him a chance to coach his son, while coach Weese gets satisfaction out of watching athletes succeed during the varsity season.

The symbiotic relationship between AAU leagues and school teams has created camaraderie between all the coaches.

"It's fun to see the kids when they're playing high school ball," Weese said. "We've had a number of kids do some great things and it's nice to know that we might have played a part in that.

"But we couldn't do a lot of this without the help of a lot of the coaches around the area because they've been very supportive ... Without [Warren] coach Chuck Ramsey's help, we wouldn't be able to do this."

trails and running paths that border Bangs Lake."

While Cox competes at the Olympic Distance level with 1.5-kilometer swim (0.94 miles), 40-kilometer bike (25 miles) and 10 kilometer run (6.25 miles), the Wauconda Sprint will be on par with standard triathlon "short course" distances. When competitors cross the finish line, they will have swum 0.5 miles, biked 15 miles and run 3.1 miles - with nothing but their inner-strength to keep them going.

Well, their inner strength along with some push from their fellow competitors.

"What's always great about it is the triathlete group is all very supportive," Cox said. "When you go out there, you want to compete, but when you get with a good training group, everyone's out there to help each other out."

The sport itself definitely is on the rise. Lake Zurich hosts a similar triathlon competition at Paulus Park. In only 11 years, the Lake Zurich triathlon has grown from rather humble beginnings to almost 1,000 competitors last year, according to the Lake Zurich Triathlon Web site.

"This year, we're expecting about 250 people, which is small compared to the Lake Zurich race," Staton said. "But we can manage up to 500 people. We're just going to try to host a good race this year and hopefully, it'll grow as time goes on."

As for people on the fence about taking part in a triathlon, Cox said the benefits far outweigh the difficulty of training for such an elite endeavor.

"I really enjoy doing it," Cox said. "It helps maintain my health and strength and it's exciting when you're in the races."

Ex-Sequoit Huebner keeping football dream alive

The prep football path for former Antioch High School wide receiver Jeff Huebner was a typical one: a year on both the freshman and sophomore teams, and then the final two on varsity as an upperclassman.

It wasn't until college when Huebner really broke out.

After putting together the best of fensive season by a receiver in Lake Forest College history, Huebner has set himself up for the possibility of continuing his football career at another level.

Huebner is spending the summer with the semi professional Kane County Eagles squad in Aurora. And he's off to a quick start, coralling 61- and 57-yard touchdown receptions during the team's 52-7 season-opening victory over Leydon last Saturday.

"They're definitely a good team to be on," Huebner said prior to the Eagles' win. "From what everyone says, they get looks from arena teams and pro scouts."

"Maybe I'll have the chance to play."

The North American Football

League regularly brings in its share of top-tier Division III players, as well as D-I regulars attempting to keep their playing dreams alive.

Huebner's 2005 season with Lake Forest was one for the school's record books. In the run-heavy Midwest brand of football, Huebner made area D-III teams pay in the air.

Huebner set a new Forester record with 1,002 yards receiving this season, breaking Colin Lundgren's record of 947 in 1985. He also tied a school mark with 12 touchdowns in '05, matching Chris Jensen's 1983 total.

Lundgren was inducted to the Lake Forest Hall of Fame during Huebner's freshman season, and with little doubt, the ex-Sequoit has set himself up for the same path.

"I don't know if I ever expected to have a season like this," Huebner said.

Charlie Corr

Certainly some of the credit can be attributed to then-interim head coach Brent Becker. Becker, who recently has taken the interim title off, replaced Chad Eisele prior to the 2005 season. In comparison to Huebner's previous three seasons, the Antioch alum got plenty of opportunities to catch the ball.

"Coach Becker gave me my shot," Huebner said. "He actually believed that I was able to pick the team up. He always believed and trusted in his players."

"He pushed us to our limits."

The 6-foot-3, 205-pound receiver didn't do a whole lot differently in preparation for his senior crusade. He regularly trained with fellow Antioch alum and recent Wisconsin Lutheran graduate Dan Church, doing their fare share of lifting and sprint workouts.

"I was a lot more focused this year," Huebner said. "I was determined every game to be the go-to guy."

This past season, the Foresters put up a disappointing 4-6 record, but injuries and youth were key reasons why their 3-0 start went sour.

Aside from 2005, Lake Forest stood at or near the top of the Midwest Conference standings through most of Huebner's career. During Huebner's freshman season, the Foresters tied for the MWC title, and this year's graduating class of 11 posted 28 victories – the second-most by a class in school history.

Huebner says his first and last games of the 2005 season will stand out the most. For both games he had a bunch of friends and family in the stands, and the second was the culmination of a record-breaking season against an offensive powerhouse in St. Norbert.

"Even though we got beat pretty bad, being out there with a group of guys you'll never play with again, that you've grown with for four years, that's just the big thing to take in," Huebner said.

• Throughout the summer, Weekly Journals copy editor Charlie Corr is running features on some of the area's top collegiate performances. He can be reached via e-mail at ccorr@nwnewsgroup.com.

Easy ways to trim some extras off the energy bill

As prices of nearly everything, from education to gasoline to a carton of milk, continue to escalate, many people are scrambling for ways to save money while maintaining their quality of life. Unfortunately, in many cases, trimming the fat off monthly bills is largely out of the hands of the individual.

One area where you can save some money is by making a few minor adjustments and saving some dollars on your energy bills. Many people smartly set aside a certain amount of money for their monthly utility bill. However, nearly everyone, be it an apartment dweller or a homeowner, has a horror story to tell about a jaw-dropping bill from their local energy provider. There are many steps you can take to save some money and remain comfortable.

• Set the air conditioning thermostat higher. While many might scoff at the thought of raising the thermostat in summertime, this can be a great way to save money. Since most people aren't home during the day, there's no need to keep the thermostat low. A temperature of 78 degrees can seem warm while you're in the house, but while you're away it will help keep the air conditioning from kicking on. If possible, open a few windows to keep fresh air coming in. If you're going away for the weekend, raise the thermostat even higher. Remember, the higher the temperature you can live with, the lower your bill will be.

• Keep the light out during the day.

While most people understandably prefer to let the light shine in when they're home, while away at work something as simple as closing the blinds, drapes and shades can greatly reduce the temperature throughout the house. That can mean coming home to a cooler house at the end of the day, one that won't require setting the air conditioner thermostat too low.

• Turn fans off while away from home. While some might feel a ceiling fan will help keep air circulating throughout the house on a hot day, the motors in many ceiling fans actually negate what benefits the fan might provide. A fan motor emits roughly the same heat as a small light bulb, actually increasing a room's temperature on a

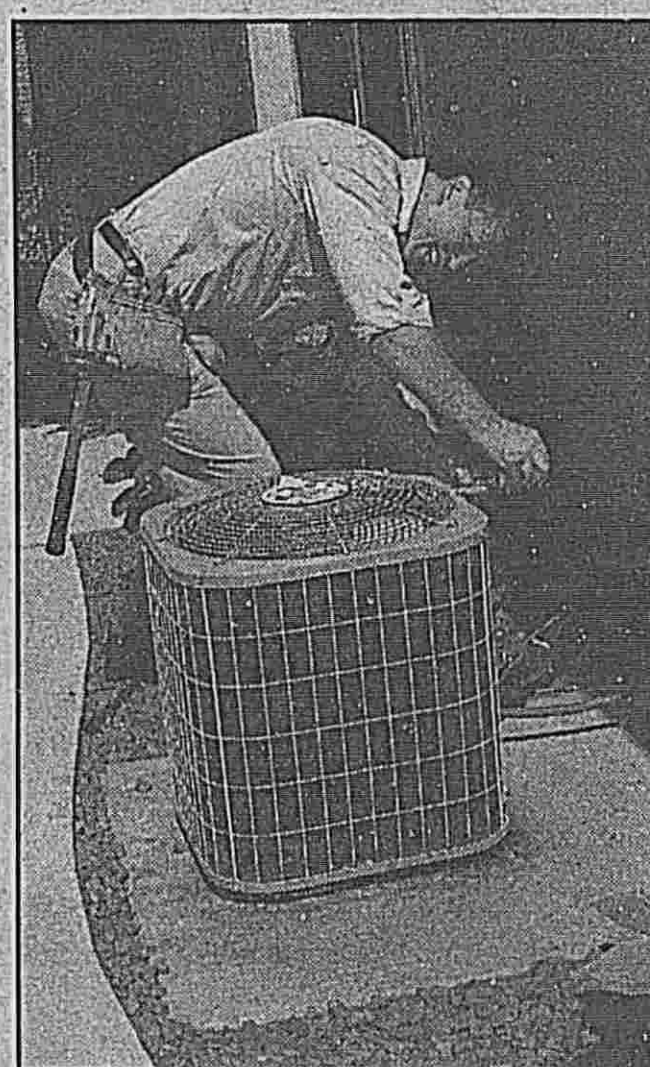

How to stay cool while saving money

- Set the air conditioning thermostat higher.
- Keep the light out during the day.
- Turn fans off while away from home.
- Don't use the oven.
- Clean out the filter on your dryer.

hot day, requiring more cooling to keep a room comfortable.

• Don't use the oven. Avoiding the oven does more than just save some money on the gas or electric bill for that appliance. Using your oven will also make your home hotter, meaning you'll need to turn up the air conditioner just to make your home livable. Try cooking outdoors on the grill or simply use the microwave.

• Clean out the filter on your dryer. Lint can build up in the dryer's filter easily, which means it will take longer to dry clothes and linens. That can do significant damage to your utility bill, so keep the filter as clean as possible.

Setting the temperature higher on your air conditioner is only one of many ways to trim some fat off of your utility bill this season.

Controlling mosquitoes in your backyard this summer

With summer finally here, people everywhere are looking for ways to control the mosquito population in their backyards. While folks fire up their barbecues and prepare for a season of outdoor parties, mosquitoes loom as a source of much annoyance. But more importantly, these pests can pose a serious health threat to families and pets. Homeowners need to develop a plan for controlling these potentially dangerous insects in their backyard.

Time is of the essence, since mosquitoes can develop from egg to adult in as little as four to seven days.

Larviciding offers consumers a proactive option for controlling mosquitoes. The process involves killing mosquitoes during their formative stages before they become breeding, biting adults.

In addition to larviciding, minimizing the amount of standing water can significantly reduce mosquitoes around the home. Homeowners should:

• Destroy or dispose of tin cans, old tires, buckets and similar water-holding containers.

• Drill holes in the bottom of recycling containers that are left outside and cover trash containers to keep out rainwater.

• Clean clogged roof gutters on an annual basis.

• Change water every week in birdbaths and wading pools.

• Aerate ornamental pools or stock them with fish.

• Clean and chlorinate swimming pools that are not being used.

• Check for trapped water in plastic or canvas tarps and arrange them so they drain properly.

• Clean animal troughs weekly.

• Irrigate lawns and gardens carefully to prevent water from standing for several days.

Since mosquitoes are known to carry diseases such as West Nile virus, canine heartworm and viral encephalitis, every preventative measure is important. With a little extra effort, summertime in the backyard can be an even more enjoyable experience.

Hal Davis, Secretary
Board of Education
Round Lake Area Schools

Lake County, Illinois

WHEREAS, the State of Illinois has enacted "An Act regulating by the State, County, City or any public body or any political subdivision or anyone under contract for public works," approved June 26, 1941 as amended, being Sections 39S-1 through 39S-12, Chapter 48, Illinois Revised

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Board of Education of Round Lake Community Unit School District Number 116, Lake County, ed, the general prevailing rate of wages in this locality for laborers, mechanics and other workers engaged in the construction of public works coming under copy of that determination being incorporated herein by reference. The definition of any terms appearing in this Resolution which are also used in the aforecopy of this determination to any employer, and to any association of employers and to any person or association of employees who have filed their names and addresses requesting copies of any determination stating the particular

WEEKLY JOURNALS WHEELS

Looking for a new car?
Read the Wheels section every week in the Market Place section.

Chronology of the Car

Now that summer is here, you probably want to get your car in tiptop shape for the old. Whether you take the car in for a tuneup, change the oil, or give it an interior and exterior wash, you will notice just how far your car has come from the days of the horse and buggy. Today's cars are a lot more advanced than ever before.

Do you remember a time when cars were not required to have automatic seat belts or air bags? How about when a new car cost less than $600?

Take a short break from your car-care chores to relive the days when cars had a two-piece curved windshield and tail fins. The following events, courtesy of "Chronicle of the 20th Century" (DK), are some highlights of important events in the development of the modern car.

April 1908 - U.S. Steel begins producing all-metal automobile wheels.

June 1919 - New York inaugurates a written test for driver's license applicants.

November 1927 - The price for a new Ford automobile jumps almost $200 from $385 to $570.

February 1930 - Traffic lights are installed at New York City intersections to protect pedestrians and drivers.

January 1938 - General Motors Corp. begins mass production of diesel engines.

September 1948 - The Cadillac comes complete with a two-piece curved windshield, a wide rear window, tail fins inspired by Lockheed's P-38 fighter aircraft and a Hydramatic automatic transmission.

July 1952 - GM offers cars with an air cooling system.

March 1960 - In New York, a car is displayed with a battery charged by solar cells.

December 1970 - President Nixon signs a bill to cut automobile fumes 90 percent by 1977.

March 1971 - Ford Motor Co. recalls Pintos due to an engine defect.

January 1974 - President Nixon signs a bill for a 55 mph ceiling on the speed limit.

January 1975 - Chrysler, GM and Ford - the "Big Three" American automobile makers - offer rebates to customers in an attempt to spur the sales of new cars.

September 1980 - The Chevy Chevette, Ford Escort and Lincoln Mercury Lynx are the first U.S. cars to record 30 miles per gallon.

July 1984 - United States announces air bags or automatic seat belts are required in cars by 1989.

July 1984 - New York institutes the nation's first mandatory seat-belt law.

In 1927, the price of the new Ford jumps almost $200 from $385 to $570!

Collapsible motorcycle trailer makes traveling easy

Motorcycling is all about fun and adding excitement to your life — until one day an accident or breakdown takes place — and your "ride" needs a ride of its own. Being stranded on the road takes the fun out of a ride for you and your fellow bikers, but it doesn't have to be that way. Plan for the unexpected by purchasing a collapsible motorcycle trailer that stores in your trunk.

Not only can a collapsible motorcycle trailer save you from a weekend disaster, but it can save you money as well. One company's innovative design even offers add-on kits which will convert its motorcycle trailer into a watercraft or utility trailer.

Although motorcycle trailers should be considered a necessary motorcycle accessory, to many bikers they are "if" products, according to Brad Stacy of QC Metal Fab, Inc. "Trailers are nice to have, if they weren't such an eyesore that can't be easily stored. A trailer is great for out-of-town rallies — if you can find a place to park it. Trailers can help you out in an emergency — if they are around when you need them."

A collapsible trailer removes the negative "ifs" from your thinking, notes Stacy, and provides several reasons for owning a stowable trailer. QC Metal Fab's Port-A-Chopper Collapsible Motorcycle Trailer is designed so that components are held together with heavy-duty bent hitch pins. Assembly or disassembly procedures are quick and easy, taking one person less than 15 minutes — with no tools needed. (Tools are required only for the original assembly of a few sub-components.)

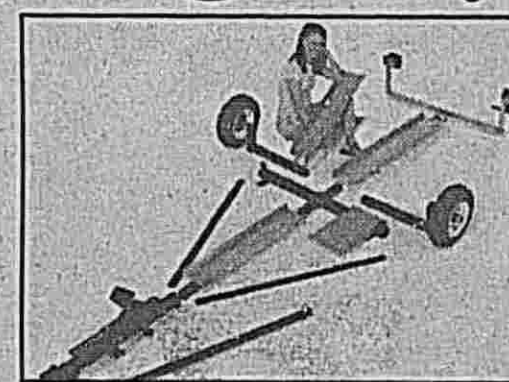

Out of sight, but never out of reach — Reason number one for owning a collapsible trailer is the ability to stow it away in a trunk or storage shed. With the Port-A-Chopper, no component weighs over 44 pounds or is longer than 48 inches, and a disassembled unit occupies about the same space as a large golf bag, making it the perfect solution when storage space is limited.

No need to "fold" on a poker run — Anyone who has ever participated in charity events or poker runs recognizes that it's not uncommon for a biker to get stranded due to a mechanical breakdown or accident. If a Port-A-Chopper is packed in the chase vehicle, there's no need to leave an unattended motorcycle on the side of the road. One person is all it takes to load a motorcycle onto the Port-A-Chopper, and adjust the tie-down straps.

No problem when your motorcycle needs service — Taking your motorcycle in for routine service doesn't require the assistance of several buddies to hoist the bike on a pickup truck. With the Port-A-Chopper, it's strictly a one-man job. Haul your bike in for service on your trailer, disassemble the Port-A-Chopper, store in your trunk, and continue on your way. You won't have to tow an empty trailer back home, and won't owe any favors.

No big deal buying a bike in a distant city — You've seen the bike of your dreams on the Internet, and want to check it out... and perhaps buy it on the spot. There's no need to beg a friend to drive with you to a distant city, and no need to drag an empty, bouncing trailer to your destination. Pack your Port-A-Chopper collapsible trailer in your trunk, use it to tow your new purchase home, and save the expense of a transporter service.

Stowable trailer ready to go in minutes

No putting up with bad weather — The most popular use of any motorcycle trailer is to travel in comfort to far-away rallies. For drives to Daytona, Sturgis and other popular destinations, a collapsible trailer provides the added option of allowing you or your travel partner the ability to drive the motorcycle part of the way (with the collapsible trailer stowed in the back of your vehicle). You'll have peace of mind, knowing that if inclement weather is forecast, you will be able to enjoy the rest of the trip inside your tow vehicle. Best of all, when you reach your destination, you won't waste time looking for a place to park the trailer — and there won't be any trailer parking fees. Just disassemble the Port-A-Chopper and store it in your trunk.

Turn your motorcycle trailer into a watercraft or utility trailer — Newly developed add-on kits convert the Port-A-Chopper to serve double-duty as a watercraft trailer, able to carry a jet ski or small watercraft weighing up to 1,000 pounds. Another kit is available to convert the standard motorcycle trailer into a sturdy 4x8-foot trailer. Unlike a typical bulky utility trailer, the Port-A-Chopper utility conversion will handle big hauling chores, but disassembles in flat pieces, requiring very little storage space.

Extreme sports performance takes public by storm

BY KATHY GRESEY

kgresey@nwnewsgrgroup.com

and EMILY PREVITI

epreviti@nwnewsgrgroup.com

GURNEE — Chelsea Ohlsen loves to skate. When asked about her travels throughout her three-plus years of skating, she grinned and rattled off the locations of skate parks near (Round Lake, Grayslake, Waukegan) and far (Kentucky).

Her grin grew when she had the chance to meet skateboarding icon Tony Hawk, whose scarred shins mirrored the knicked knees of Ohlsen, 10, who lives in Round Lake.

Hawk stopped by Six Flags Great America in Gurnee on Monday to rehearse with his nine-man crew for Boom Boom HuckJam Ramp Ragers 2006.

Years ago, the event may not have drawn hordes of spectators, but the increase in the sport's popularity since the mid-1990s left Jim Taylor, public relations manager for the park, describing a space that fits 1,000 people as "limited."

Gurnee marks the first stop on the 30-day national tour, which Hawk launched in 2002.

"[That's] one of the perks of being one of the biggest, baddest Six Flags [parks] in the country," Taylor said.

Fitting, as Hawk is arguably the top dog of skateboarding, if not the sport's most widely known athlete.

Hawk's omnipresence proves the sport's snowballing popularity, which he credits with improvement of the sport's public image since television coverage has spun the sport in a more positive light than in the past. He also mentioned an increase in the number of skate parks and video games as factors raising society's awareness of the sport's legitimacy and artistic capacity.

Pro-skateboarder Jesse Fritsch, 27, of Encinitas, Calif., said he does not expect the sport's movement into the mainstream to compromise its non-conformist roots.

"It's up to you how far you take it," he said. "All in all, it brings more kids into it. The kids that [come out] to see this are kids like I was. That will never change."

"There are still skaters who want to ride the handrails at the Federal building," Hawk added.

Fritsch, who also fronts and pens lyrics for San Diego punk-pop quartet Operatic, cited Hawk as one of his role models. His other idols include Mike Frazier and Neal Hendrix, who also are skateboarders on the tour.

"I still freak out about it," he said. "[I think], 'why do I deserve to be here? I'm a just a kid.'"

But Fritsch appears to mean a bit more to the tour.

Hawk dubbed Fritsch's sidelined status, courtesy of an injured back, as the main challenge, along with coordinating the athletes' schedules for this year's show.

Skater Paul Zitzer, 34, drove in from Louisville, Ky., to fill the spot. He said Fritsch thought he would be a good last-minute replacement.

"We're good friends, and he figured I could do the tricks," Zitzer said. "[Preparing] is pretty tough. It's hard enough to skate and do well, but to drop in with four or five people on the ramp ... it's a little nerve racking."

Zitzer was uncertain whether he would continue on the Boom Boom tour, but said he was glad to have been selected for the Gurnee performances.

"I'm happy to be here, even if it's for one day," he said.

Though the show's skaters and BMX riders dominate the performance in number, the two-person motocross component is not to be ignored.

Rider Drake McElroy, 24, said including motocross creates more movement, which strengthens the performance's visual appeal.

"We have a little bit of everything," he said. "There is a lot more action that way."

The performance incorporates skateboarding, BMX and motocross, and the athletes ride on two ramps. On the 14-foot vert ramp, skateboards and BMX bikes roll in synchronization and in solo runs that weave around one another. The motocross riders perform jumps that span 70 feet on separate ramps. Punk and hip-hop music blares in the background throughout the show.

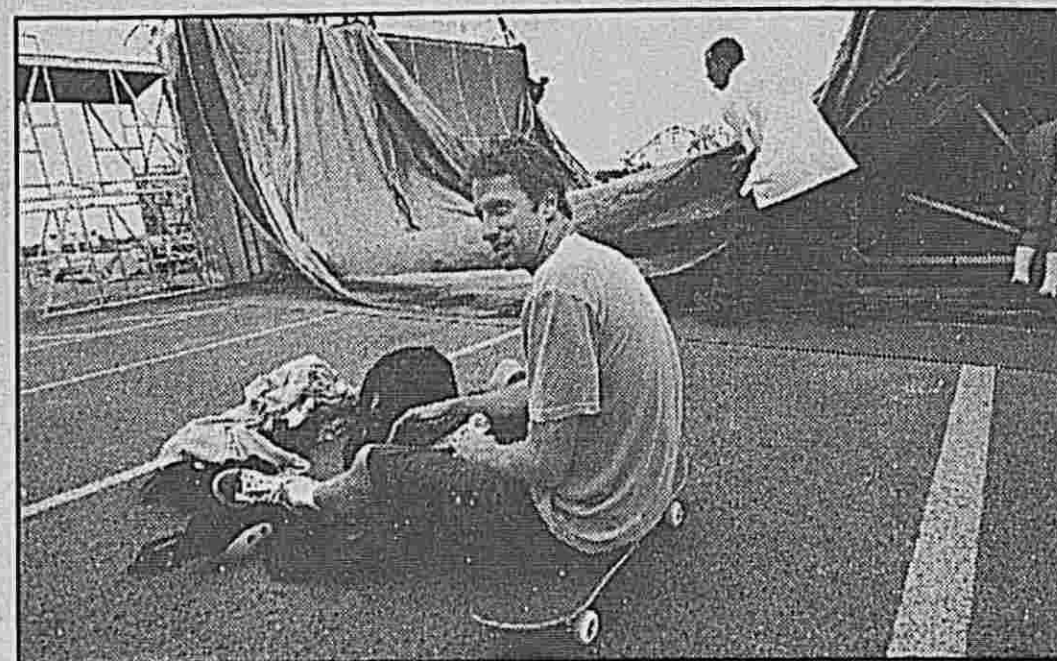

Hawk choreographs the routine, but considers the other athletes' suggestions and leaves room for improvisation.

"There is a lot of freestyle in our show," he said. "You just have to be in the right place at the right time."

Fritsch said the performance allows the riders to relax and collaborate.

"[HuckJam is] less pressure and more fun than skating a contest," he said.

Hawk said the teamwork and interaction involved in the HuckJam distinguishes it from contests.

Skateboard legend Sergie Ventura said the first time he heard Hawk talk about Boom Boom, he was ready to join the team.

"[Hawk] had this brewing," the 34-year-old said. "I told him, 'If you have a show like that, you know I will blow it up.'"

Ventura has found his niche. He dominates air off the ramp, and as a Boom Boom veteran, he helps out the team's newcomers.

"I try to bring a great, positive energy," he said. "I joke, and I make these guys laugh. I try to make the new guys comfortable."

It is because of the team's talent and camaraderie that they are able to perform so well, added Ventura. Trust and friendship allow all three sports to successfully blend as one.

"You put it all together and you have a wonderful show," he said.

Did you know?

From the beginning, Tony Hawk did not rely on his stature to land [insert name of any and all skateboard moves here].

The wiry Hawk, who lost count of the tricks he created when he hit 90 moves in 2004, described his approach to the sport as one of confidence, concentration and perseverance.

"You [might] try it once and it's not what you expected, and the risk is more than you thought," he said.

The risk proved worst for Hawk on Nov. 20, 2003, when he fractured his pelvis. He could not walk for a few weeks, and he recalls the difficulty of his first time back on the ramp.

Hawk, 38, of Encinitas, Calif., demonstrates the physicality of the sport, as well as his own tenacity, when he raises his jeans to reveal pink scars on his shins.

So runs the price for nearly 100 first-place finishes, including a gold medal for best trick at the 1999 X Games, where he achieved the world's first successfully-landed 900-degree aerial.

Hawk's success on the circuit has enabled him to lend his name to products from clothing to video games. He also co-founded Birdhouse Skateboards and has inked a deal with Jeep.

Also, Hawk has allocated over $1.1 million to communities around the country to assist them in building skate parks through the Tony Hawk Foundation.

The assistance to about 300 parks around the country enables Hawk to facilitate skating and riding for subsequent generations.

Has he come full circle?
"If I start sucking, I'll stop doing it," he said.

Zimmerman looks at life of Proust

One-woman show gives an inside view to author's secrets

By TOM WITOM

thomaswitom@yahoo.com

French author Marcel Proust (1871-1922) made his mark in literature with "Remembrance of Things Past," but apparently kept his own counsel as far as his private life was concerned.

In her latest work, "M. Proust," playwright Mary Zimmerman turns to the writings of Mme. Celeste Albaret, the author's full-time housekeeper and confidante during the last decade of his life, to draw a perspective on Proust the man and on his literary legacy.

Mary Beth Pell gives a tour-de-force performance in the one-woman show as the loyal, protective Albaret, who breaks her silence 50 years after Proust's death. The play is premiering in the Steppenwolf Upstairs Theatre.

Albaret's story isn't one of the true confessions, tell-all genre. It's more homage paying, and, from her perspective, setting the record straight.

Immediately after Proust's passing, reporters, authors and scholars set up a clamor for details about the writer's eccentricities, neuroses, secret nocturnal life and sexual proclivities.

During a demanding 90-minute performance, Pell, as Albaret, reads snippets from Proust's published manuscripts and recounts numerous conversations the author had with her.

She recalls how Proust discussed visiting a brothel, where he told how he observed a flagellation scene. He said it was for research purposes, to stir his imagination as a writer. Albaret dismissed suggestions that Albertine, the great love of the narrator's life in "Remembrance of Things Past," was based on Proust's secretary Alfred Agostinelli.

"Why do people see only what they want to see?" Albaret asks with no hint of Albaret also recalls Proust's favorite painter, Dutch artist Johannes Vermeer van Delft. With the help of "painters, musicians and great writers, we

Pell deftly takes on various personae as the memoir unfolds. And she is expertly supported by a team of lighting designers, sound engineers and scene artists, all of whom are proficient at their work. Add Eric Rosen's thoughtful direction, and "M. Proust" is transformed into a thoroughly engaging piece of theater.

Violence, poetry intermingle in 'Duchess of Malfi' revival

By TOM WITOM

thomaswitom@yahoo.com

"The Duchess of Malfi" by John Webster, a 17th century English dramatist and contemporary of Shakespeare, is a brooding, tragic work not often performed these days.

Intelligently adapted and directed by Michael Halberstam at Writers' Theatre, this often-violent and horrific play captivates modern theater audiences with its poetic language and entangled characters.

Loosely based on real-life events, "The Duchess of Malfi" starts off as a love story about a widowed young Italian noblewoman who secretly weds one of her servants, Antonio, and has two children by him.

By remarrying, the Duchess has gone against the wishes of her two brothers, the incestuously obsessed Ferdinand who has a streak of madness, and the scheming Cardinal.

Both men are concerned about divvying up their inheritance with any heirs of their sister.

Eventually, word reaches them in Rome from Bosola, the head of the guard and a spy whose reports on the turn of events in Malfi prompt the brothers' vow to seek vengeance.

It's a nasty business that follows, made all the more compelling by the theater's intimate space. Confidences are betrayed and witnesses to the truth slain. An accidental murder, summary executions and bloody brawls ensue.

By the play's end, only a few characters remain standing.

The tragedy's superior cast is headed by Elizabeth Rich as the Duchess, James Meredith as Antonio, Christopher McLinden as Ferdinand and Nick Sandys as the Cardinal. There's also good work by Matt Kozlowski as the heartless mercenary Bosola and La

Experience the Cheyenne history

Field Museum offers culture

CHICAGO – Celebrate the artistic vibrancy of Cheyenne history and present-day culture through color photographs of Cheyenne art and objects in the Field Museum's exhibition "Cheyenne Visions."

The exhibit features 34 photographs of war bonnets, tipi covers, arrows, a cradle cover, personal adornments, and other art and artifacts from the museum's Cheyenne collection. Examples of objects portrayed in the exhibit include a beaded woman's traveling bag, articles used for the shinny stick game, war shields used in dances and objects to make life comfortable in tipis.

Because of the religious nature of some of the photographed objects, those objects themselves never are displayed at the Field Museum. Out of respect for the Cheyenne and other Native Americans, the museum maintains special areas in collections with limited access.

Check it out

- "Cheyenne Visions" is free with museum admission. The museum is located at 1400 S. Lake Shore Drive, in Chicago.

- The Field Museum is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Labor Day. Last admission is sold at 4 p.m.

Today, museum collections, such as those depicted in "Cheyenne Visions," provide a way for Cheyenne people to reconnect with their heritage. This exhibition has toured Cheyenne cultural and educational centers throughout Oklahoma, and is now back in Chicago.

Decorative beading covers these objects, which were handmade by members of a Cheyenne tribe. The deer-skin gloves, buckskin pouch and powder horn all offer visitors a glimpse at the amount of detail the Cheyenne put into their crafts. Photographs of these items and other objects, such as arrows, war bonnets and tipi covers will be on display in the Cheyenne Visions exhibition through January 2007 at The Field Museum.

Brandon Routh stars as Superman in Warner Bros. Pictures' and Legendary Pictures' action adventure, "Superman Returns."

Man of steel reaches a new generation

By PAM & GEORGE SINGLETON

Following a mysterious absence of several years, away from the heroics of saving lives and the city of Metropolis, Superman returns to earth after searching for other survivors from his home planet of Krypton.

This means his alter ego, Clark Kent, news guy, is back on the scene as well because the two are, after all, one person. The actor taking on the mantle of Superman is Brandon Routh, a relative newcomer to the big screen.

Lois Lane (Kate Bosworth of "Bee Season" and "Beyond the Sea"), Superman's confidante and onetime girlfriend, is a reporter at the Daily Planet who is on a special assignment when Superman drops back into her life.

He rescues her and a plane-load of press from a totally implausible, special effects tailspin. Lois still has a soft spot for "The Man of Steel," but she has not been waiting in the shadows for him to return.

When Clark Kent shows up at the paper looking for his old job back, he discovers what Lois has been doing. She's just won a Pulitzer Prize for her article titled "Why the World Doesn't Need Superman."

Superman's archenemy is Lex Luthor (Kevin Spacey). Luthor wants to annihilate Superman and rule the earth. His mind is truly twisted.

Superman's vulnerability is on display when he is confronted with a deadly dose of kryptonite and plunges to what should surely be his death. What saves him is a secret Lois Lane reveals to him.

Superman saves the summer

As a Gen-Xer, I have known three Supermen in my life.

First for me was Christopher Reeves from the "Superman I-IV" movie series. Then there was Dean Cain in the 90s, who played a 20-something Superman on television. And of course, in the aught years, we've had the young, handsome and brooding Tom Welling from "Smallville."

Helen Mansfield

Even as a kid, I found the "Superman" movies to be silly. I mean, really, Superman III had Richard Pryor in it!

When I heard Hollywood was going to start the Superman franchise over again and take up at the freaky "Superman III" stage, I thought it would be an awesome opportunity for Tom Welling to lead the charge to the big screen.

"Who the heck is Brandon Routh?" I remember asking. The boy wasn't even alive when the series came out on the big screen in the 70s, and he's been on "One Life to Live" and "Gilmore Girls."

I'm certainly not above admitting when I am wrong, and I have to say, "Superman Returns" is going to be the movie that saves the current summer box office slump.

Routh is able to channel the best parts of both Superman and his alterego, Clark Kent.

In "Superman," Routh gives the man of steel a smoldering humility that has been absent until now. As Kent, Routh is able to make the likeable schlub amusing, without making him too comical or oafish. Routh also has the voice and fa-

Love is a season filled with regret

By PAM & GEORGE O. SINGLETON

Jean-Pierre (Laurent Lucas, "With a Friend Like Harry") is a hit man who has lost his dispassionate ability to kill. Love may be the path out of his criminal life when he reunites with childhood soul mate, Michelle, played by Irene Jacob, Best Actress winner at Cannes for "The Double Life of Veronique" and nominee for Kieslowski's "Three Colors: Red."

The story is an emotional slice of life about where people are in their lives today and how they got here. In their world of a gray and tarnished Paris, some survive and some don't. Even those that live may redefine survival. Though not gritty in the sense of "The Godfather," or "Casino," the film comes uncomfortably close to revealing people that could be acquaintances, such as a friendly restaurant owner or an amusing cab driver.

Much of the power in the film comes from learning more about the characters' strengths, hopes and fears by what they do or do not do, rather than from the flashbacks (which are well done) or loads of dialogue (which is natural). One by one, each person must face their inner solitude as they are driven to extremes that lead to desperate violence.

An impressive first feature by Ra'up McGee, who has written and directed documentaries and went to film school in the U.S., but decided that "Autumn" must take place and be filmed in an urban Paris that tourists do not see. With exceptional cinematography by Erin Harvey, a veteran of many National Geographic films and McGee's photographer for his documentaries, the film sets a mood that draws you into its underworld. An oddly mysterious shot of the bottom-half of a cloud-shrouded Eiffel Tower is mesmerizing.

"Autumn" has much of the élan of last year's French thriller "Cache." Fans of film noir in general will love the ambiguities of what motivates the characters. The title of the movie is a metaphor of the film's themes of memory, choice and regret. Autumn is a time of beauty, yet it also symbolizes slow decay and forecasts a cold winter and often an uncertain future.

cial expressions to make Superman suave and Kent, well, just precious.

Casting Frank Langella as Perry White, Kent's boss at the "Daily Planet," and Kevin Spacey as villain Lex Luthor was right on the money.

I found Kate Bosworth's Lois Lane a little thin, and though I've been a tremendous fan of Parker Posey in her independent roles, as Luthor's girlfriend Kitty Kowalski, she didn't quite fit.

Even if you're not up on all the Superman mythology, the average Joe and Jane six-pack would enjoy this film.

I believe the whole "gay Superman" rumor got started by the folks at FOX because they couldn't come up with anything derogatory to say about the film and of course because director Singer himself is homosexual.

Superman captivates new audience

• MAN OF STEEL

"Superman Returns" is elevated by the combination of good writing, fine acting and some mind-boggling special effects.

We enjoyed the film, but ironically we wondered why it was not as gratifying as "X-Men: The Last Stand" or "Spiderman 2." It's probably because Superman is so, well, superhuman.

"X-Men" and "Spiderman" have been around awhile, just like Superman, but with one key difference. Their powers are special, while Superman is almost God-like. Only when he is around Kryptonite are his powers drained.

Those who liked Superman from the 1950s and 1960s will appreciate the almost retro feel of the film. The question is, will those in their teens and twenties feel the same?

Superman returns

Cast: Brandon Routh as Clark Kent/Superman, Kate Bosworth as Lois Lane, Kevin Spacey as Lex Luthor, Parker Posey as Kitty Kowalski

Director: Bryan Singer

Genre: Comic book-based action adventure, fantasy

Other: Warner Bros.; rated PG-13 for some intense action/violence; running time is 157 minutes

Oh, the things people say

Throughout my almost 20 years of working with animals, I have seen and heard many things that, if I didn't have restraint, would have me either pulling chunks of hair out of my head, or have me throttling the person who said it.

Here is my "Top 10 Stupid Things People Say About Animals" list:

1. My dog (or cat) had a litter because it's important for the animal to experience motherhood. Why put your pet through the pain and risk of a pregnancy? Pets don't need to experience pregnancy.

2. My dog (or cat) had a litter so my children can experience the animal having puppies (or kittens). This is one thing your kids don't need to see. There are 3 to 5 million homeless dogs and cats who will die this year because there are not have enough available homes. Teach your children about the bigger picture. Be part of the solution, not the problem.

3. My dog (or cat) got pregnant by accident. A neighborhood dog (or cat) got into my yard. An unaltered male will smell a female from blocks away and do anything they need to do to get to that animal. Get your pet spayed and you won't have that "accident" happen.

4. I haven't had my dog (or cat) spayed because I heard they should "go through one heat cycle."

Sandy Kamen Wisniewski

Why? Give me one really good, logical medical reason. This leaves the door wide open for an accidental pregnancy. (Refer back to number 3.)

5. I let my cat roam outside because that is the natural thing to do. It's cruel to have a cat confined to a house. Do you let your toddler go outside alone? Cats don't know how to look both ways for cars, and in winter they find warm car engines quite cozy. Also, they hold no chance against a big raccoon or a coyote.

6. My dog lives outside because he likes the isolation, solitude and fresh air. Dogs are pack animals and thrive on spending as much time as possible with their pack. Isolating them will cause depression at the very least and behavior problems at best.

7. I chain my dog to a tree 24 hours a day because he keeps escaping the yard. Read number 6. Now add to that "how would you like to be tied to a tree?" Either have the dog inside the house as a member of the family or give him to someone else who will.

8. I couldn't take care of my cat/bird/rabbit/small critter anymore, so I set him free in a forest preserve. He'll fend for himself just fine. These animals are domesticated animals and will never be able to fend for themselves. They will die of starvation, or will be killed by a predator, or by a car.

9. I spank/hit my dog when he is naughty. How else can I get him to listen? Try dog training classes. Dogs don't get spankings.

10. When my dog "goes to the bathroom" in the house, I drag him to the place where he went and stick his nose in it and holler, "no going to the bathroom in the house!" A dog's memory is short. All he understands is he is being dragged back to some poo or pee and his nose is being stuck in it, and his owner is very mad.

Elvisfest provides fans opportunity to 'stop, look and listen'

By HELEN MANSFIELD

hmansfield@nwnewgroup.com

YPSILANTI, Mich. — When punk-a-billy crooner Mojo Nixon sang "Elvis is Everywhere" back in 1987, the artist formerly known as The King had been in the cold, cold ground behind his Graceland home for 10 years.

Or maybe he's not back there. It all depends on who you believe.

Nixon sang:
When I look out into your eyes
out there,
When I look out into your faces,
You know what I see?
I see a little bit of Elvis
In each and every one of you out there.

Let me tell you.
Welllllll ...

Elvis is everywhere,
Elvis is everything,
Elvis is everybody,
Elvis is still the King.

In years past, the town of Ypsilanti, Mich., has seen 10,000 Elvis fans and fanatics descend on their community as part of the annual Michigan Elvisfest. The event runs Friday and Saturday, July 7 and 8.

According to Elvisfest Director Mary Decker, this will be the seventh Elvisfest, an event sanctioned by Elvis Presley Enterprises Inc.

"It started as a local thing, but people come from all over," Decker said.

Having received Graceland's blessing, Michigan Elvisfest has been written up in a number of fanzines and listed on all related Web sites.

On Friday night, Decker said 11 "Elvi" will perform throughout the evening. These performers come from all over the Great Lakes region, as well as Canada and Florida.

Decker said each interested Elvis submits a performance tape, and they are then selected by a committee.

"We have a lot of volunteers," Decker said of the entire

Eating healthy carbs

The goal for the third month of weightloss is two-fold: to make the change from consuming processed refined white grains to whole grains and to eat healthy carbohydrates - fruits and vegetables.

There is a significant amount of scientific evidence suggesting that for most of human evolution, until about 10,000 years ago, the primary staple in the diets of most civilizations was protein from animals or fish. Generally the consumption of fruits, vegetables, nuts and seeds was seasonal and supplemental.

Ancient civilizations did not have electricity for cold storage. These foods were eaten as they grew in the warmer months. The protein sources served to condense nutrition in their meats. One pound of meat contains the nutritional equivalent to several pounds of vegetables.

There are many conflicting theories as to why we began farming. Most agree farming practices, or nurturing the growth of a specific plant species, began no longer than 20,000 years ago and more likely as recent as 10,000 years ago. Since then, there has been a progressive amount of grains consumed - especially highly refined grains.

A refined grain is a processed carbohydrate that has been stripped of fiber and many of the nutrients now known to be cancer-fighters, critical for heart health, helping to stabilize blood sugar and enhance bone health. Whole grains are defined as grains containing the complete kernel (all three parts) and nutrients like Vitamin E, boron, folic acid, zinc, as well as phytochemicals like lignans, phytoestrogens and phenolic acids.

When shopping for grains, check the labels. If the label says made with enriched or wheat flour, multi-grain, rye or pumpernickel flours, then it is mostly a refined grain.

If your goal is weight loss, it is best to limit the amount of grains. Consuming in season fruits and vegetables are a much healthier source of carbohydrates. The best sources of carbohydrates are vegetables grown above the ground, as they are full of nutrition, yet less starchy and sweet than below-ground vegetables. For variety only, add seasonal fruit to your meals or snacks.

Consuming some high quality protein and fat along with non-starchy vegetables and whole grains is best. This slows up the absorption of the carbohydrate, keeping you full longer.

The more starchy or sweet the meal or snack, the more quality protein and fat is needed to balance it, so eat smaller quantities to avoid over eating.

In concluding this three-part series on weight loss, portion management is the first priority, eliminating white sugar is your second-month goal and eliminating white processed grains and choosing healthier carbohydrates is the third month goal.

Remember to be patient with yourself - we all slip up and make some unhealthy choices.

Some information was taken from www.personaltrainingonthenet.com and "How to Eat, Move and Be Healthy" by Paul Chek.

● Game Dork

Summer leaves time for new games

Even a game dork like me thinks kids should play outside more than they should play video games, but school is out for summer, and idle hands will be antsy indoors.

So here's my progress report for children and adults to kill a few lone-some days and nights. These games are the best of 2006 so far.

It's not just parents who ask for recommendations of non-violent games. Some adults, who apparently have zero blood-lust, also ask me for tips. These gamers are in luck. It's a good year for peaceful titles.

The sleeper hit of the year is "Brain Age: Train Your Brain in Minutes a Day" for Nintendo's handheld DS. Anyone who hasn't played it is justified in thinking it sounds geeky and boring. You merely solve math puzzles and sudoku puzzles, but it is crazy addictive. I played it 15 straight days before taking a break. It's rated "E." NNN out of four.

"Guitar Hero" for PS 2 is about as much fun as you can have with an interactive game. It comes with a plastic guitar with five buttons instead of strings. The game shows you which button to press while a rock song plays. Seems simple, but it's a challenging blast. Rated

"T." ("Guitar Hero II" comes out this fall.)

"Burnout Revenge" is the standard in car races, with fairly realistic city streets and slow-motion crashes that rock. It's rated "E 10+" for Xbox 360, Xbox and PS 2.

"Viewtiful Joe: Double Trouble" is one of the best DS games ever. The DS isn't super-powerful, yet "Double Trouble" has a great cartoon look. It's rated "E."

It's been a bad year for sports games, but "College Hoops 2K6" for Xbox 360, Xbox and PS 2 is a sleek, fun and smooth basketball title, though it can be hard to beat. It's rated "E."

Even better is "Fight Night Round 3" for Xbox 360, Xbox, PS 2 and PSP, a superb boxing game with legends and newer boxers. It's rated "T." Be sure to check it out.

Learn to prepare farmers' market bounty

By TOM WITOM

thomaswitom@yahoo.com

"The San Francisco Ferry Plaza Farmers' Market Cookbook" (Chronicle, 2006) by Christopher Hirsheimer, a former executive editor and co-founder of Saveur Magazine, provides readers with an organized guide to preparing locally harvested fresh herbs, vegetables and fruits.

While the book goes into a history of the regional market, its applicability extends far beyond the West Coast. Lake County residents, for example, find themselves within an easy drive of farmers' markets selling local produce.

Take advantage of this bounty by dishing out some homegrown Strawberries with Aged Balsamic on Greek Yogurt, an appealing, easily prepared dessert. Such berries tend to exude flavor and character much more pronounced than the mass-grown variety found at the neighborhood grocery.

Strawberries with Aged Balsamic on Greek Yogurt (Serves 4)

2 pints strawberries, hulled and sliced lengthwise
Splash of aged balsamic vinegar
2 Tbl. packed dark brown sugar
1 pint imported plain yogurt, or high-quality vanilla ice cream

Directions:

In a bowl, combine the strawberries, vinegar and sugar. Toss briefly to coat evenly, and let sit for a few minutes to draw out some of the juices.

Place a big scoop of yogurt or ice cream into 4 individual bowls. Top with the strawberry mixture and serve.

Rhubarb and Vanilla and Creme de Cassis (Makes 2 to 3 cups)

2 lbs. plump rhubarb stalks (8 to 10 stalks) cut into 1-in. pieces
One-third cup sugar
One-third cup creme de cassis
One-half vanilla bean, split lengthwise

Directions:

Preheat oven to 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

In a large baking dish, stir together the rhubarb, sugar, creme de cassis and vanilla bean. Place in the oven, and bake until the rhubarb has released its juices and is tender when pierced with a knife, about 30 minutes. Avoid stirring the rhubarb as it bakes to ensure the pieces do not break up.

Remove the dish from the oven. Pick out the vanilla bean, and using the tip of a knife, scrape the tiny seeds into the rhubarb, and stir gently to mix. Serve warm, or let cool and store in an airtight container in the refrigerator for up to 2 weeks.

Variation: To assemble a rhubarb fool, fill stemmed glasses with alternating layers of the cooled baked rhubarb and freshly whipped cream, ending with the cream. This dessert can be made several hours ahead, covered with plastic wrap and refrigerated until serving.

This summer, fireworks won't be the only dazzlers on the Fourth of July — or at your summer backyard barbecue. When you gather friends and family, serve up the best of the season with flavors that sparkle, sizzle and satisfy.

Stir together a Firecracker Salsa or a crisp salad made with fresh sweet cherries from the Pacific Northwest. Cherries remain one of the last truly seasonal fruits. Their short but oh-so-sweet season begins in early June and runs through mid-August.

For more information and recipes, visit www.nwcherries.com, www.alaskaseafood.org and www.cuervo.com.

Chipotle-Glazed Alaska Salmon With Northwest Cherry Firecracker Salsa (Makes 4 servings)

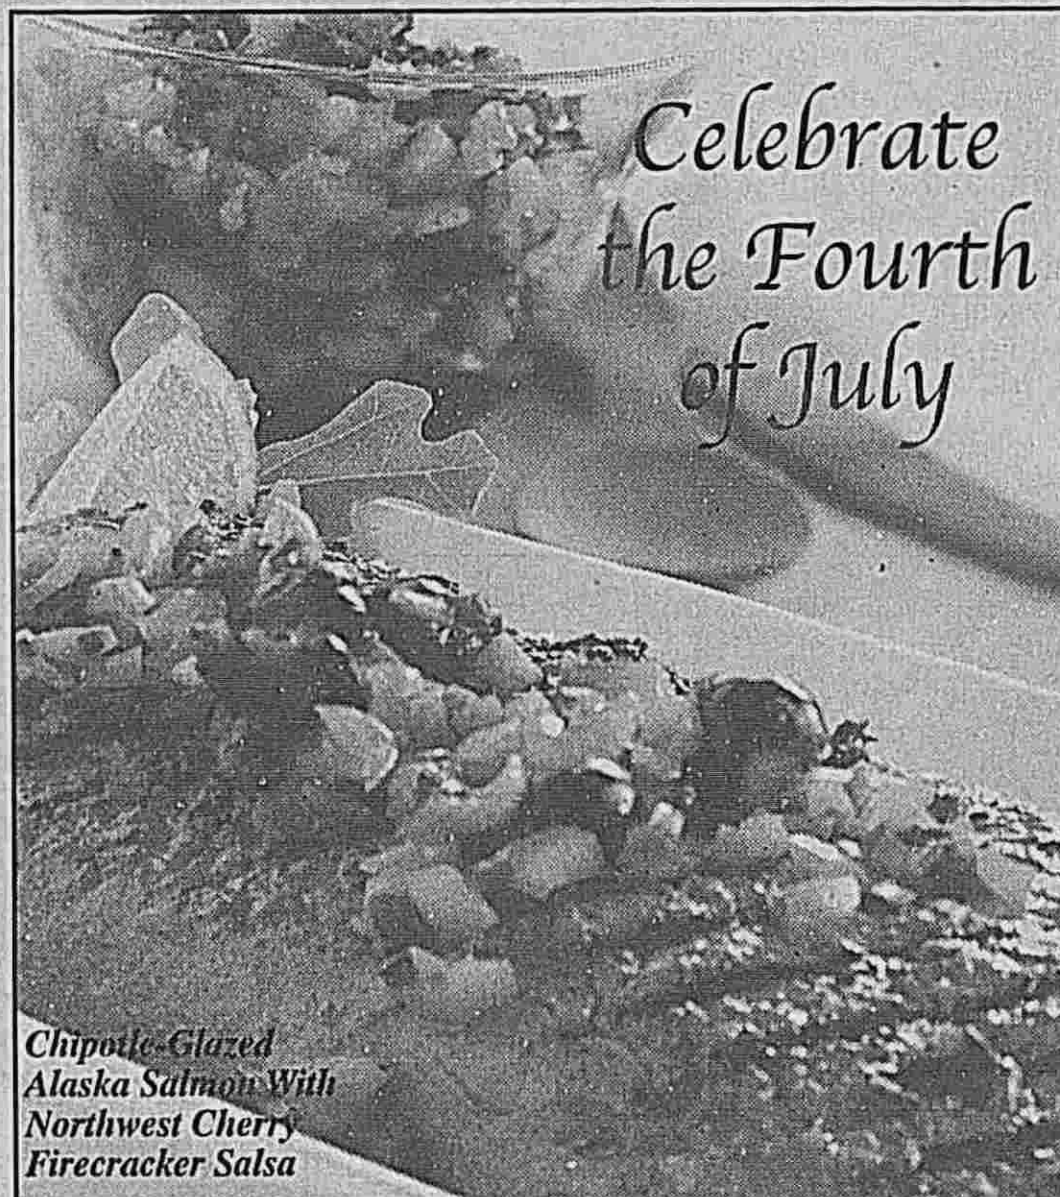

4 Alaska salmon fillets (6 to 8 ounces each) skin on, or 1 Alaska salmon side (1-1/2 to 2 pounds)
Olive oil, for brushing
1 teaspoon kosher salt
2 teaspoons lemon pepper seasoning

Glaze

1/4 cup (1/2 stick) unsalted butter, melted
1/4 cup Jose Cuervo Golden Margarita
1 tablespoon packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon chipotle chili powder

Salsa

2 cups pitted fresh sweet Northwest Cherries, halved

1 small yellow bell pepper, seeded and chopped
1/2 cup chopped green onions
1 small jalapeño pepper, seeded and minced
1 tablespoon Jose Cuervo Golden Margarita
1 tablespoon olive oil
1/2 teaspoon chipotle chili powder
1 teaspoon kosher salt

To make glaze, blend melted butter, margarita, brown sugar and chili powder. Set aside. For salsa, in large bowl combine cherries, bell pepper, onions and jalapeño. In small bowl, whisk together margarita, olive oil, chili powder and salt. Pour over salsa; stir to blend. Set aside (can be served chilled or at room temperature).

Heat grill to medium-high heat (400°F). Brush both sides of salmon with olive oil. Sprinkle flesh side with salt and lemon pepper. Grill salmon, flesh side down, 8 to 10 minutes per inch of thickness. Turn over halfway through cooking time. Brush salmon with glaze during last 1 to 2 minutes of grilling. Cook just until fish is opaque throughout.

Pour any unused glaze over salmon just before serving, and serve with salsa.

'The King' is ready to entertain guests at Elvisfest

• ELVIS

Elvisfest process.

Each Elvis will be backed by the Chicago-area group known as The Expense Account Band. Between sets, Decker said other tribute acts will salute the likes of Buddy Holly, Cher, Tom Jones, Ray Charles and others.

On Saturday, Elvis activities will be geared toward the youngsters, with face painting, clowns, magic acts and kid's karaoke.

Throughout the weekend there will be Elvis merchandise for sale, a beer tent, raffles, food, a classic car show and a Viva Las Vegas Tent, which will host Texas Hold'em and Black Jack.

Decker, a woman in her late 50s, said she has been, and remains, an Elvis fan.

"I've always liked his music, the gospel, the rock, his philanthropic ways," Decker said. "We're keeping all that alive for the kids now."

Decker said she's been to Graceland once herself and said she was impressed with the mansion situated on 14-acres in downtown Memphis.

Elvisfest visitors have come from all around the United States. Decker even remembers a group of documentary filmmakers who came a few years ago from Chili to shoot several Elvis tributes around the U.S.

The White House announced recently that President George W. Bush and Japanese Prime Minister

Junichiro Koizumi, a rock 'n' roll fan, will visit Elvis Presley's Graceland mansion on June 30.

Banking on population growth

Financial institutions work to gain trust of immigrants

By MATT PERA

mpera@nwnewsgroup.com

In some countries, financial volatility is a fact of life. Making use of a bank is not an option in much of Mexico and Latin America, especially for lower- and middle-class families, as the danger of economic collapse looms and threatens to deplete life savings.

Once immigrant workers make their way to the U.S. from those countries, that mentality often lingers.

They do not trust banks and seldom want to let their earnings leave their sight.

Instead, they often decide to send the money to their native country, or buy something tangible and immediate, such as improvements to their home, new clothes or a vehicle.

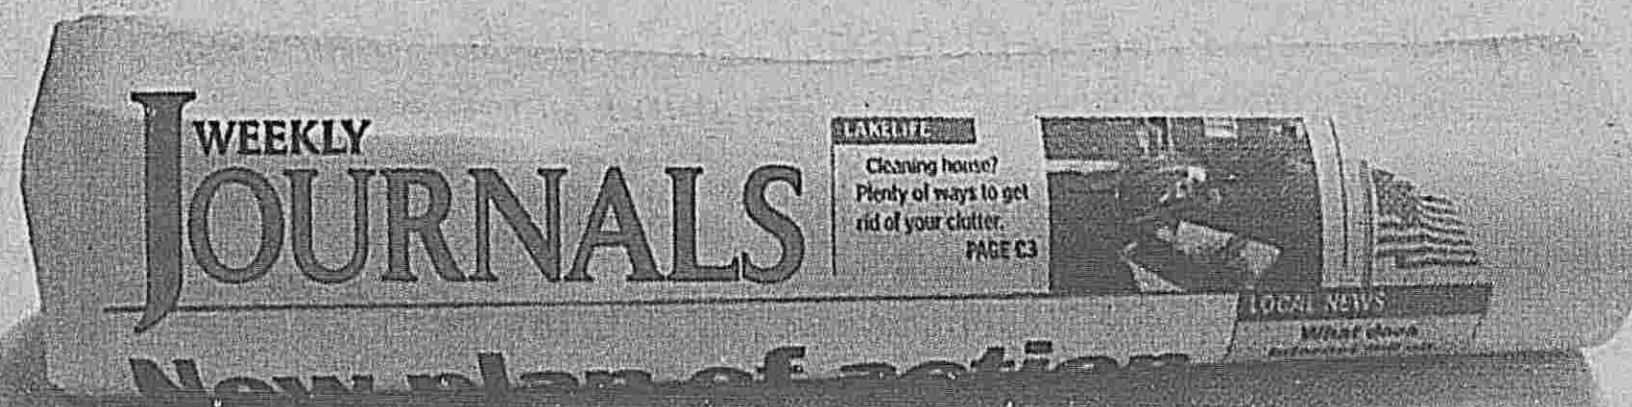

But, as the immigrant population continues to swell in Chicago and throughout the suburbs, banks have recognized an untapped resource with an increasing level of spending power.

With that acknowledgement has come efforts on behalf of financial institutions and community organizations to spark interest in banking among immigrants and alleviate their apprehension.

Jim Bilello, a representative of the Chicago-based firm U.S. Marketing, has worked with banks and insurance companies to solicit interest in Hispanic neighborhoods.

ROUND LAKE

West Nile Virus found in county

By HELEN MANSFIELD
hnmansfield@nwnewsgroup.com

ROUND LAKE - Betty and Tom Schmidt of Round Lake have been married for nearly 65 years. The couple used to visit their weekend home on Round Lake Beach for a number of years before they finally settled on East Lake View Street permanently.

The pair are now in their 80s and are a little concerned about their lakefront view and the potential threat of the West Nile virus.

On June 15, a dead crow collected by the Lake County Health Department in Winthrop Harbor tested positive for West Nile Virus. The bird is the first confirmed case in the county this year.

"The mosquitos this year have been terrible," Betty Schmidt said.

Schmidt may be "worried sick" at the idea of contracting the West Nile Virus, but at the same time, she is a fount of knowledge when it comes to preventative measures.

She advises people get rid of any stagnant water they may have lying around their property, but she admits that she has a birdbath in her yard.

"Stay inside during the early morning and late evening hours," Schmidt advised. If you have to be out, she suggests wearing long-sleeved, light-colored clothes, and insect repellent.

"Tom is the type of person that if there's a mosquito within 20 miles, it will bite him," Schmidt said with a laugh about her husband.

Schmidt said her neighbors along East Lake View Street used to pitch in yearly to have their neighborhood sprayed, but that has lapsed in recent years.

"Maybe we stopped for environmental reasons, I don't know. [The cost] wasn't very much," she said.

Residents like Schmidt may remark that the wet weather is to blame for the higher population of mosquitos and according to Mike Adam, senior biologist with the Lake County Health Department, it is and it isn't.

Adam said wet weather makes for nice conditions for flood-water mosquitos. These mosquitos are annoying, but they don't carry disease.

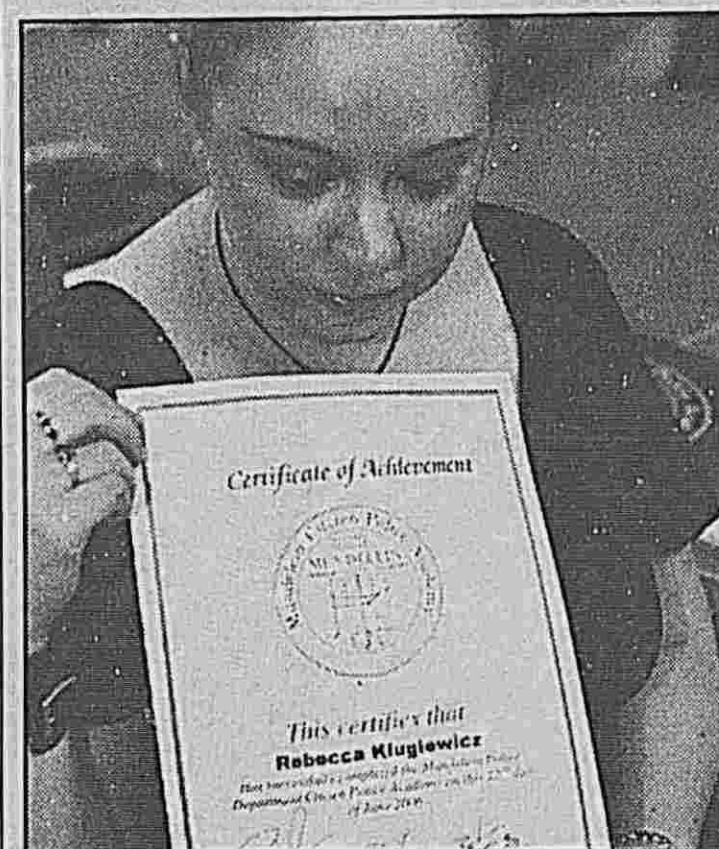

The culex mosquito is usually the culprit that carries the West Nile virus in Lake County, but Adam said they prefer a hot, drier climate. During last year's drought, there were a lot of culex mosquitos.

"Time will tell," Adam said as to whether West Nile cases will reach the 2005 levels of 12 dead birds.

"[The virus is] here," Adams said. "We usually see dead birds in June and the populations pick up in July and August."

Adam said the Lake County Health Department will test a limited number of dead birds for the virus and encourages residents to call the West Nile hotline at (847) 377-8300.

Lessons learned at police academy

MUNDELEIN - Ten weeks ago, I thought I understood the job of a police officer.

I was wrong.

Over the past couple of months, I learned what it really takes to protect and serve, thanks to my participation in the Mundelein Citizen Police Academy.

I wasn't sure what I expected, but I assumed the class would be formal. It wasn't. We were free to interrupt and ask any questions we wanted.

Officer Brian Kisselburg has run the academy for four years. He guided us through the class, from week one when we learned about the Northern Illinois Crime Lab, to week 10 when we received our certificates of completion and celebrated.

Through lectures, I learned about the role of the coroner, the training of a police canine, the role of a SWAT team, the importance of a drug task force and how to conduct an investigation.

The hands-on activities were especially interesting. I shot three guns, including a rifle, with live ammunition. I attempted to stop a "bad guy" from robbing an ATM machine in an interactive video game. Unfortunately, it turns out that I'm not a good shot.

The simulated ammunitions class gave me the opportunity to don a bullet-proof vest and act out a police call. The participants in the class got to be the cops, while the real police officers played the criminals.

Most of all, I learned about the dedication with which police officers and others in law enforcement serve their communities. Through community policing efforts like the police academy, officers take their time to teach citizens about the way police work, the importance of safety and how to have fun responsibly.

Deputy Chief Mike O'Brien said the academy provides a chance for citizens to experience the life of a police officer.

"We try to set this up so you all get to see what we see," he explained.

Kisselburg, the class coordinator, also said a few words at graduation.

"Obviously, we do a little more than drive around and write tickets," he said.

That's a definite understatement.

•This is the final article in a 10-part series about the Mundelein Citizen Police Academy.

INGLESIDE

Camp allows burn victims a chance to relax

By STEVE PETERSON

speterson@nwnewsgroup.com

INGLESIDE — The Illinois Fire Safety Alliance brought hundreds of youths to "Camp I am Me" for the 16th consecutive year to enjoy Fish Lake and its environs, Camp Duncan YMCA. The camp, which ran from June 18 to 24 is designed as a place for burn victims to gather, sharing stories and camaraderie.

"My parents found out about it through the hospital or fire department. I attended for nine years before going through counselor-in-training," said Molly, a junior camp counselor.

Molly enjoyed the camp so much she created its current slogan and had it placed on her license plate.

Molly said that her fateful incident occurred when she was five years old and coffee was spilled on her. She has since recovered fully from her injuries.

"A lot of people have similar stories. I healed well. I was a lucky one," Molly said.

The dogs, horseback riding and swimming time were always popular during the week of camp.

Highland Park firefighter John Burens in his second year as a counselor, supervised a game of cup stacking on a Friday afternoon.

"It boosts their self esteem from the time they start to the time that they leave. A lot of the kids need a positive role," Burens said.

The Highland Park Fire Department is a regular contributor to "Camp I am Me."

Nicole and Bianca, twins age 16, are softball players in Rolling Meadows who have both come to the camp for several years.

"I was scared at first, but now it is a second home to me. My favorite activities started with horseback riding, but now it is the crafts," Bianca said.

"When the camp is over, we don't say 'good-bye', but 'see you next year'," Nicole said.

Kathleen Hagge, chairwoman of the event, has been associated with it since 1988, when a few burn victims were sent to a similar camp in Colorado. By 1991, the camp had started a tradition of coming to the Ingleside campground.

"For a week, they can really enjoy wearing shorts, being with other burn victims, and not having to worry about what adults or others are thinking about them," Hagge said.

Campers are from ages 8 to 16. A dance capped off the week's fun.

"There are always a lot of tears on the last day, but as I tell the campers, they should not be sad that it is over, but happy that it happened," Haage said.

Hagge cautioned all to be safe, especially around fireworks time for the Fourth of July celebrations.

Brandon, 16, of Chicago, helps hold the rope for other rock climbers during the Illinois Fire Safety Alliance Burn Camp at Camp Duncan in Ingleside.

"We don't let children touch a lighter or take a pizza out of the oven, but the edge of a sparkler can be 1,800 degrees," Hagge said.

Illinois Fire Safety Alliance is a non-profit coalition of individuals dedicated to fire and burn prevention through public education. The cost to send one child to "Camp I am Me" is about $1,000. All children attend camp at no cost to their families.

GRAYSLAKE

Land swap between fairgrounds and farm on hold

By GREGORY HARUTUNIAN

news@lakelandmedia.com

GRAYSLAKE — The Lake County Fair is set to open July 25, and fair association officials are focused on logistics and staging for the various events, as they have since incorporating 75 years ago.

The sentimental atmosphere surrounding this year's edition is that it may be the last county fair held on the 106-acre grounds, located near the intersection of routes 45 and 120.

"We've been here since the mid-1950's, and I even attended my first 4-H show here in 1958," said David DeYoung, the Lake County Fair Association's president. "We've outgrown the site, and the maintenance and upkeep have become cost-prohibitive, like the [agriculture] buildings, which aren't brick and mortar structures."

A land swap has been proposed exchanging the fairgrounds for the Titus Family farm on Peterson Road, east of Route 45.

A special fair association board meeting June 12 resulted in the entire matter being tabled, pending the resolution of recent developments impacting the transaction. Also the meeting halted an authorization for board members to enter negotiations with Skokie-based Grayslake Farms LLC to sell the fairgrounds for $26.5 million.

Highland Park-based SKW Capital Management LLC entered into a contract agreement to purchase the 160-acre Titus Farm June 9, and have not addressed the fair board regarding a land transfer and sale.

Also, Simon Property Group, Inc. from Indianapolis, may be seeking to join with the SKW group on the venture. Simon is a major national holding company with properties in shopping centers, including the Mall of America in Minnesota.

"We received a confirmation of the agreement, and we've had limited conversations with them. We're waiting for [SKW] to make a proposal, and then, have time to review the issues and stipulations," DeYoung said.

The Titus Farm, located in Fremont Township, is an integral component to the future commercial prospects for the township itself, Fremont township Supervisor Pete Tekampe said.

"The main advantage is that there would be no residential dwellings on the parcel, and there's a good possibility for commercial aspects that would help our tax base and school systems," he said.

"There are certain issues with the trade that we would have to be walked through, and we're expecting some type of communication [with SKW] within the next two weeks."

Grayslake Farms LLC had indicated that it would initiate development and establishing retail stores on the fairgrounds site, which would benefit Grayslake because it would provide increased sales tax revenues for the municipality.

"Our situation is that another venue would permit organized construction and planning for structures, rather than the 'as-needed' planning that took place on the current site," DeYoung said.

Our View

Competition for cable TV is a must

A federal law being considered by the Senate would allow cable and phone companies to offer TV and Internet service without local franchise agreements.

Many consumers feel taken advantage of by local cable companies such as Comcast, which purchase monopolies by paying towns franchise fees. Competition should bring prices down.

The Communications Opportunity, Promotion and Enhancement Act would allow for national franchise agreements for cable and phone companies. In particular, the change would allow phone companies to avoid having to negotiate agreements with municipalities around the country and instead begin offering TV service through fiber optic lines more quickly.

One of the biggest issues with the proposed law relates to the Internet. Some believe that a concept known as net neutrality should be included in the law.

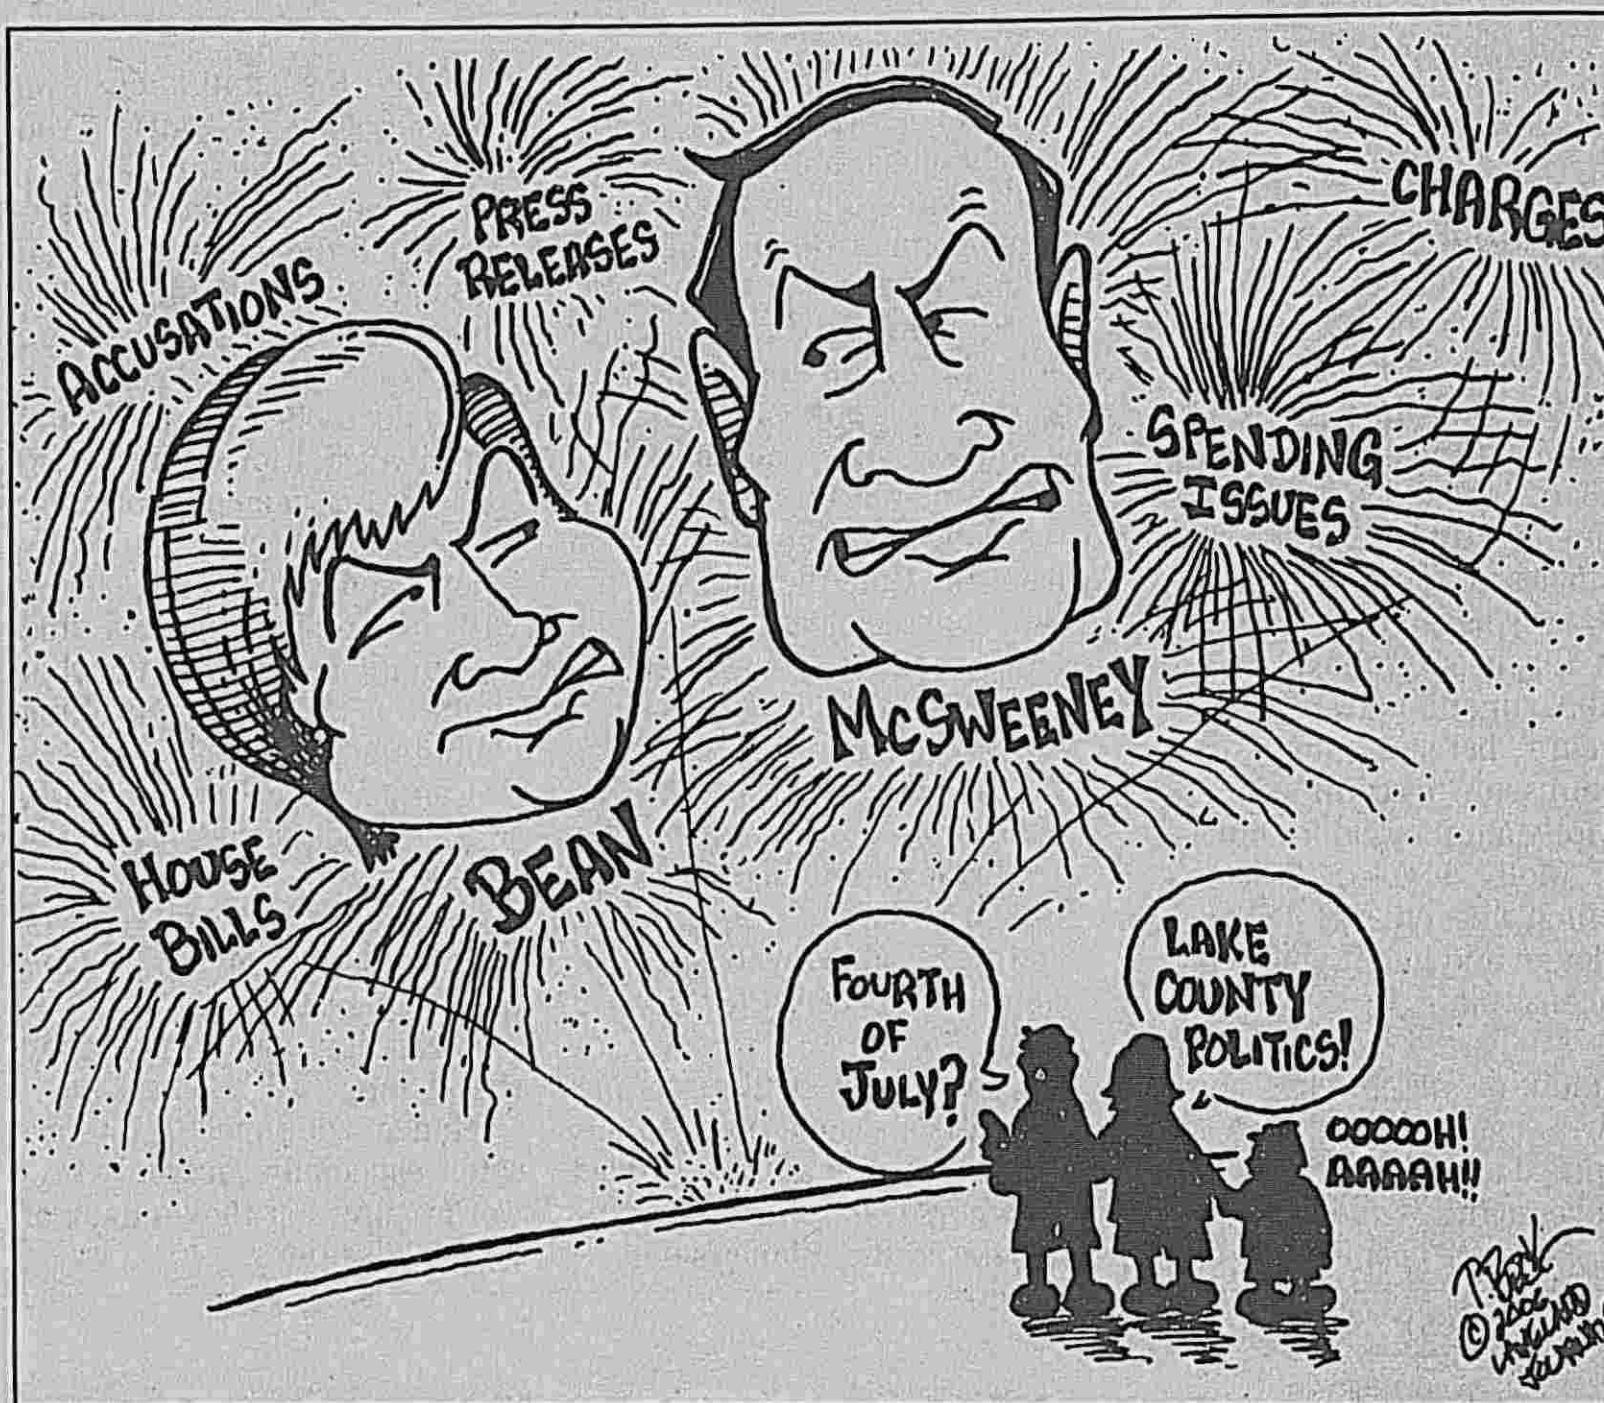

Common Cause, a nonpartisan advocacy organization, describes net neutrality as being able to access Web sites and services free of any interference from Internet service providers.

Some worry that net neutrality will be lost and that the new law will help pave the way for Internet service providers to create "fast lanes" to Web sites that pay a premium. Or that corporations will somehow "own" the Internet or control content.

The fact is that the Internet has evolved terrifically without any regulation by the federal government. And it might not be a good idea to have the government begin regulating. If consumers are concerned about net neutrality, they can choose an Internet service provider that embraces that concept.

Also, the federal law has provisions allowing municipalities to still start their own broadband companies. And some communities are tinkering with the idea of citywide wireless Internet access. The notion that corporations will take over and somehow monopolize the Internet seems unlikely.

The world of communication is rapidly changing and no one knows exactly how all of these changes will shake out. But it does seem clear that we should not hold back companies from providing consumers with choices.

See it Through

High gas prices, is it really supply and demand or market control?

Last summer, when the price of gas at the pumps was rising, we heard a lot of warnings of, "just wait until next summer, and you'll see the prices rise to $3 a gallon." They were off by a bit. We hit the $3 mark in spring. And now, they are warning us that we may face $4 and more per gallon in the near future.

I keep telling myself, I've got to write some good news in this column. But, let President George W. Bush be my witness, there just seems to be bad news coming out of Washington. In fact, as I'm writing this, a bulletin just flashed that his approval poll numbers dipped down to 29 percent. If it gets worse, he'll lose his relatives.

Remember, during the last presidential campaign, when it was reported that Bush's chief political aide, Karl Rove told the loyalists not to worry about the record budget deficits because the voters just don't understand the complexities of such large shortfalls. Unfortunately, he was right.

What the voters do understand is what's in their wallets. Karl Rove, and every political strategist knows that. One of them coined the phrase, "It's the economy, stupid."

Even with the help of credit cards, more and more motorists aren't filling up on their trips to the gas station. It just is too much and puts a dent in what they can spend on their other needs. So, when voters do fill up their tanks but empty their wallets they understand, even if they don't understand the country's budget woes.

The political strategists like to take all of us for dummies. Just as they spend and spend beyond record heights believing it's beyond our comprehension, they try to convince us that government can't do anything to control the record rising prices of gasoline.

They've been hoodwinking the public for years, and they'll keep doing it until the public gets mad as hell and collectively say they won't stand for it.

You've heard the line before. They say, it's all about supply and demand. In a real and honest world, I'd buy into that notion.

● Editorial Principles

Here's our promise to our readers

Journalism is a process. A journalist's aim is to discover truth.

It is a human endeavor. Although it requires machinery, it is not automated. There is no operator's manual.

It is driven by thoughts, ethics and reflections. Therefore, it is not, and never can be, perfect.

Yet we strive for perfection. We live at a time when the Internet allows anyone capable of tapping on a keyboard to be a citizen journalist and contribute to the global discourse.

What separates the institutions of journalism is the transparency of reliability, credibility and integrity.

Because our publications are – and must be – trusted and proven sources of news and information in the communities we serve, our editors believed that it was essential to articulate our standards for publication.

During the past three years, our editors have worked to create the 10 components that compose the principles by which we gather and share news with our readers. These principles encompass our company's core values, beliefs and best practices, and have been in effect since Dec. 1, 2005. They are standards readers might use to judge us on our performance.

We have adopted practices from some of the media's most respected companies and the Society of Professional Journalists.

What follows is a summary of those principles.

A complete version of the NorthWest News Group's statement of editorial principles, which total nearly 1,400 words, can be found on the navigation rail in our online editions.

NorthWest News Group Editorial Principles

1. We Are Not Special People; We Are Regular People With a Special Job.

Because journalists subject people and institutions to intense and constant scrutiny, we must maintain the highest principles in our conduct. Our integrity is our most valuable asset. Without it, we lose the public trust invested in us by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

2. Truth and Fairness Must Underscore What We Publish, How We Behave.

We are committed to the highest standards of truth and honesty; accuracy and fairness; accessibility, accountability and independence. We will diligently pursue truth in the public interest, without regard to special or personal interest.

3. Personal Interest Cannot Interfere With Our Acting in the Public Interest.

We will not use our newspaper positions to gain benefit or advantage in commercial transactions or personal business for our families, our acquaintances or ourselves.

4. Outside Work Must Not Conflict With Our Primary Job
We may free-lance for publications that are not in direct competition with NorthWest News Group properties. We are primary employees of the newspapers for which we work, and these newspapers compete on a local and regional level.

5. TV and Radio Appearances Extend Our Brand as the Local News

Chris Krug

Leader.

While appearing on TV or radio, we should be identified as representatives of our newspapers. During such an appearance, we should meet the same high standard of fairness and impartiality as is expected in our jobs.

6. Personal Relationships Will Not Affect Our Editorial Judgment.

No staff member should write, photograph, illustrate, or affect news judgments about anyone related by blood or by marriage, or about whom s/he has a personal relationship. This does not apply to first-person stories and personal columns, or stories and columns in which the relationships are clearly identified.

7. Confidential Sourcing Is Allowed Only in Special Circumstances.

We will seek to disclose to readers the name of the source of all information we gather for publication. Such transparency is important to lend credibility to sources. If we do withhold the name from publication, we will ask for an on-the-record reason for concealing the identity and will include that reason in the story in such a way that the source is not revealed.

8. Obscenities and Profanities Generally Should Be Avoided.

With few exceptions, we will not print obscene or profane language. The editor or managing editor must approve any such publication. Source and context will be considered. Obscenities and profanities offend many readers and often divert attention from a story.

9. People With Whom We Deal Deserve Our Respect.

We will seek to protect victims and witnesses of crime, especially when their lives or safety might be endangered by publication of their names or addresses. That includes victims of rape, child molestation, and sexual abuse, and those protected by a restraining order.

Names of victims of such crimes might be published, but only if approved by the editor or managing editor.

10. Violators Could Face Discipline.

A knowing violation of this code will subject an employee to disciplinary action, up to and including termination.

Oil companies, CEO's earnings do not mix with American market

• MATJEVICH

It's supply and demand, all right.

The big oil companies control the supply, and the big oil companies demand the price. The oil industry can manipulate prices by purposely manipulating the supply. In effect, it can control the market.

As the saying goes, "the price and proof are in the pudding." The high prices at the pumps have resulted in record profits for the "big five" major American oil companies. Exxon Mobil reported $10 billion for the first quarter of this year and its CEO just retired with a $400 million pension.

Now tell me. Is there any reason in heaven or on earth that the oil industry that has earned record earnings should, on top of all that, get billions more in tax breaks and subsidies paid by American taxpayers?

Just as oil and water don't mix, allowing windfall profits by oil companies and handing out huge taxpayer subsidies to those same profiteers doesn't mix, in my book. It shouldn't come as any surprise, though, as the industry has tunneled millions in campaign contributions in Washington.

So, President Bush, in answering his rhetorical question of, "What can the government do?" - Order the Justice Department to investigate whether there has been any price-fixing by the oil companies.

I thought that he might corral some of the usual suspects, because many of them are his friends, to a meeting at the West Wing.

In a friendly and persuasive way, he could say something like, "Everyone has done quite well for quite some time, and now might be a good time to back off a bit."

Now, wouldn't that be a gas?

• Because of space constraints Party Lines and Esther Cepeda's column Off and Running do not appear in this edition. Both will be back next week.

Therapeutic recreational specialists rely on crafts to treat people with illnesses and disabilities

For those unfamiliar with the work of therapeutic recreation specialists, also known as recreational therapists, the name might imply that these individuals are solely in place to teach others how to relax and have fun. While they do rely on relaxing and recreational activities, the main scope of the work is to help those with illnesses or disabilities regain control of their mental and physical well-being.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, therapeutic recreation specialists provide treatment services and recreation activities to individuals with disabilities or illnesses. They rely on a number of techniques, including arts and crafts, animals, sports, games, dance and movement, drama, music, and community outings to reduce depression, stress, and anxiety in patients. They are also integral in helping others recover basic motor functioning and reasoning abilities. What's more, recreational therapists often build confidence in their patients so patients can socialize effectively and enjoy greater independence, as well as reduce or eliminate the effects of their illness or disability. Some specialists help people with disabilities better integrate into the community by teaching them how to use the resources at their disposal.

Therapeutic recreation specialists can work in a number of fashions. Some are employed by care facilities, such as hospitals, rehabilitation centers and other health care centers. In these settings, they often work with patients who suffer from a particular illness or disability, often in conjunction with a medical plan outlined by doctors and nurses. Recreational therapists may also work in assisted living or other residence homes, or be employed by private individuals. In this situation, their main role is improving the general health of a patient by providing a creative and recreational outlet. Although most therapists are employed in other areas, those who work in schools help counselors, teachers, and parents address the special needs of students, including easing disabled students' transition into adult life.

Therapeutic recreational specialists often rely on crafts in addition to other activities to treat people with illnesses and disabilities.

To become a therapeutic recreation specialist, one must receive a bachelor's degree in therapeutic recreation or in recreation with a focus on therapeutic studies. Entry-level positions or activity director positions in nursing homes may be acquired with an associate degree in recreational therapy, in addition to training in art, drama, or music therapy, or qualifying work experience.

Most employers prefer to hire an individual who has received certification in therapeutic recreation. Certification is granted by the National Council for Therapeutic Recreation Certification. In addition to having a degree in therapeutic recreation, an individual must also pass a written exam and participate in a select number of internship hours in order to receive certification.

To learn more about a position in recreational therapy, visit the National Therapeutic Recreation Society at www.nrpa.org or the American Therapeutic Recreation Association at www.atra-tr.org.

Campfires are the leading cause of children's camping injuries

For many children, summer includes roasting marshmallows and sitting around an outdoor fire at summer camp, on family camping trips or in the backyard. Although these are summer traditions, campfire accidents send thousands of children to the emergency room with burn injuries each year. Burns account for 74 percent of all children's camping injuries, and nearly 50 percent of children admitted to hospitals with burns are less than 4 years old.

"Because children are smaller than adults, there is a greater chance a burn will affect a child's joints," said

Wendy Hill, MD, medical director of the Hospitalist Program at Children's Hospital of Wisconsin-Fox Valley. "Burns to the joints are serious because they can cause limit a child's range of motion if they are not treated by professionals."

The most well-known causes of burns to children are walking into open flames, and pouring combustibles like gasoline on fires. Surprisingly, fires that have been extinguished can be more dangerous. Campers often bury hot coals under dirt or sand to extinguish flames without realizing the buried coals can remain hot for up to 24 hours.

Even eight hours after a campfire has been buried in sand, one second of contact with the area can cause first-degree burns. Approximately 70 percent of all camping burns occur this way.

Campers are encouraged to extinguish fires with water instead of sand, and stir the water and ash until it is cool.

This is just one of many ways to prevent campfire burns. The American Burn Association and the U.S. Fire Administration recommend the following safety rules to make campfires safe and enjoyable:

- Do not leave a campfire unattended.
- Always stay with children, and keep them a safe distance from the fire.
- Never allow children to build or light a fire, even with adult supervision.
- Have water nearby before lighting a fire.
- Never start a fire with combustibles like gasoline.
- Wear fitted, tightly-woven clothing and closed shoes around a fire.
- Make sure children know to stop, drop and roll if clothing catches on fire.

Mistrust of banks makes immigrants leery to invest

• IMMIGRATION

He said immigrants tend to be skeptical, at least initially, of the programs and services offered by U.S. financial institutions.

"There is a huge mistrust of banks because, in many Latin American countries, including Mexico, there have been at times rampant inflation and, if you put your money in the bank and don't spend it, when you take it out it may be only a tenth of what it was originally worth," Bilello said.

That guarded attitude toward banks, however, is being shed at an escalating rate.

More banks now accept identification from immigrants that does not require U.S. citizenship.

One such form of identification, the matricula consular, has been offered by the Mexican consulate in Chicago since 2002 to Mexican immigrants living in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

The other, known as the individual taxpayer identification number (IPIN), was introduced in 1996.

Both allow undocumented workers to open a bank account, or obtain a mortgage, without a social security number.

Alternate forms of identification, along with more services geared toward immigrants, has led to growing relationships between that community and financial institutions, according to Harry Pestine, community affairs program director with the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago.

"There is greater interest in the banking community to offer products for the immigrant market and services for the immigrant market," he said. "And, through education and trust-building initiatives, there is a much greater acceptance of products by [the immigrant community]."

The Mexican consulate also recently teamed with the FDIC and several financial institutions to create the New Alliance Taskforce. The organization aims to attract immigrants to using U.S. banks.

Cesar Romero, spokesman for the consulate, said the initia-

By the numbers

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago collaborated with the Brookings Institution, a non-partisan think tank based in Washington D.C., to release a study last month titled, "Financial Access for Immigrants: Lessons from Diverse Perspectives." Below is a brief look at some of the findings.

• 76 percent of native-born household heads have a checking account, while 63 percent of immigrant household heads use that service.

• 68 percent of native-born household heads have a savings account, compared to 55 percent of immigrant household heads.

• Immigrants spend $2 billion annually on check-cashing services outside of banks.

tive had helped immigrants in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin open about 200,000 bank accounts. Account balances average about $2,000, he said, totaling an estimated $400,000,000.

Some banks have offered free remittance services that allow immigrants to send money to their home country.

Romero explained that the objective of the alliance, and the matricula consular, was to help immigrants integrate into mainstream banking, and expand the banks' customer base.

"There are people who want to bring money out from under their mattresses and that's good for everybody," he said.

Pestine added that Lake County exemplified an area where the immigrant "population is growing, and opportunity for the banking community should be growing as well."

Francis Gordon, a personal banker at Northside Community Bank in Gurnee, said he has witnessed that growth firsthand.

He explained that his bank offered bilingual services to immigrants wishing to set up an account or apply for a loan.

"I think that's great for the Hispanic community that banks are now waking up and trying to strategize the best ways to approach the growing community," he said.
